Heimwahr Chief Calls Dollfuss Guilty in War; Vienna Revolt Flares

Revolt Penetrates to Center of Vienna Near Embassies.

Heimwehr Leader Blames 'Betrayers'

Chancellor Beseeched to Seat Parliament; Nazis Active.

Vienna (Friday), Feb. 16 (U.P.). Gunfire rattled through the heart of Vienna at midnight as the battle-scarred capital was binding up the wounds of four days of fighting in which fierce revolt of the Socialists had been put down by the government.

The outburst was the first time the revolt had come to the center of the city. The firing was in the First District on the edge of the Third District.

Leading hotels and the diplomatic quarter were nearby.

A press representative, arriving on the scene shortly after the firing broke out, saw a soldier fall. A comrade dragged the man behind a wall.

Reinforcements rushed to the scene. The troops apparently were suspicious of the reporter's identity, for they told him to "turn back or we will shoot."

The correspondent, Harold Peters, received his first indication of a renewal of hostilities as he was standing in a phone booth in the Stadt Park section. A soldier interrupted him and asked him to leave quickly because the electric light in the booth might attract the fire of both the Socialists and soldiers.

Riflers notified a first-aid station of the renewal of hostilities, and minutes later the first ambulances appeared on the scene. Motor coaches carrying Heimwehr troops appeared quickly.

Loyalists Put Down Socialist Rebellion

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Vienna, Feb. 15.—Amid the blood and confusion of a Socialist insurrection, a new crisis in the civil war abruptly developed tonight when the commander of the Fascist Heimwehr publicly accused politicians of Chancellor Dollfuss' own party of the real responsibility for the sanguinary conflict.

Leaders of the group, the Christian Social party, promptly petitioned the chancellor to reconvene the Austrian Parliament, which he shelved a year ago so he could rule by decree.

The four-day rebellion seemed to have been put down. All municipal apartment blocks, where the Socialists made their most tenacious stands against troopers' bombardments, were this evening in the hands of the army or police.

Cubans Avenge Old Killings

3 Machado Henchmen Are Slain by Gunners on Way to Trial.

Havana, Feb. 15 (AP).—Three persons were shot to death and four wounded today as unidentified machine gunners wrote an epilogue to "Bloody Friday" of September 27, 1932, when one Machado henchman and four anti-Machado leaders were killed.

Apparently tiring of the slowness of trials, a group riding in a closed automobile riddled a police wagon in which defendants charged with the 1932 killings were riding to court.

One defendant, Juan Saemes, a servant of three Jeyre de Andrade brothers slain two years ago, was killed, as were Valentin Valdez, an Army corporal guarding the prisoners, and Aurelio Vasquez, wealthy property owner. Vasquez was riding with his brother-in-law, Augustin Sorhegui, former police captain. Sorhegui was among the wounded defendants.

Other defendants wounded were Raimundo Brito and Julio Dieguez, former policemen charged with complicity in the 1932 assassinations.

After the attack, the assailants speeded away, but their automobile collided with a small truck. They got out of their car and escaped afoot.

Soldiers guarding the defendants fruitlessly returned the fire. A woman riding on a passing street car had the bridge of her nose shot away.

4 Dogs Killed for Biting Girl.

Cortland, N. Y., Feb. 15 (U.P.).—Four dogs paid with their lives today for attacking a 6-year-old schoolgirl, who will bear the marks of the mauling for the rest of her life.

Youth Dies as Auto Crashes Street Car

Trolley Driven From Rails Into Gutter When Speeding Machine Hits Car; Driver, 22, Is Fatally Burned as Auto Flames.

One man was fatally injured, another slightly hurt, and 15 other persons escaped injury last night when a street car was knocked from the tracks on Connecticut avenue near Albemarle street northwest as a result of collision with a speeding automobile.

Chauffeur of the machine, James Ragland, 22, Negro, was fatally burned when the automobile burst into flames. The street car was thrown across the roadway onto the sidewalk.

Ragland, who was said to be driving the car of his employer, Robert Patterson, of 3225 Highland terrace northwest, was taken to Emergency Hospital, and died two hours later.

Motorman of the street car, Ollie B. Brookman, 27, of Rosslyn, Va., sustained a slight arm injury as a result of the terrific impact. The 15 passengers were unharmed as the trolley car careened across the street.

As the automobile burst into flames, John McDonald and Joe Clark, employed nearby, rushed to the rescue with fire extinguishers. They entered the burning automobile and pulled Ragland out.

Numerous witnesses said they had seen the machine Ragland was in pass in the opposite direction a few minutes before the crash at a high rate of speed.

A few minutes later, police were told, the sedan roared back in a southward direction. Just past Albemarle street it swerved sharply to pass another car and then careened into the street car.

The impact was heard for many blocks. Traffic was tied up for nearly an hour.

Compromise By Fairbanks, Pickford Lost

English Suit Broke Off Their Reconciliation, London Hears.

London, Feb. 15 (AP).—Douglas Fairbanks, sr., and Mary Pickford had affected a compromise to end her divorce action, and a reconciliation of the screen's most famous sweethearts was expected by their friends, it was learned today, when Lord Ashley recently instituted proceedings against Lady Ashley and named Fairbanks the co-respondent.

The Ashley case, meanwhile, advanced a step with filing of appearances by lawyers of the American film actor and the doll-like Lady Ashley, the former Sylvia Hawkes, an actress.

In Palm Beach, Fla., Miss Pickford said she had "no comment whatever to make."

The filing of appearances will enable Fairbanks and Lady Ashley to move to contest Ashley's suit within the next two weeks, but the Associated Press learned from an indisputable source that the American star was advised to let the action simmer out quietly and not fight it. This informant called rumors that Fairbanks will marry Lady Ashley "ridiculous," and added the real trouble between Doug and Mary was that she wanted to continue her film work.

Rockefeller Leaves For Florida Home

The 94-year-old retired financier and philanthropist sent out word to the press through his secretary that he was tired and wanted to rest as much as he could.

Lorton 'Graft College' Flayed In Congress

Rep. Shoemaker Charges Wholesale Fraud and Demands Inquiry.

The District Reformatory was called "The Lorton College of Graft" yesterday in a blast delivered on the House floor by Representative Shoemaker (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, during a general attack on the Federal penal system.

In address bristling with colorful phrases, similar to his designation of the reformatory and his frequent reference to the Department of Justice as the "Department of Injustice," Shoemaker charged that Lorton is seething with graft and corruption and social diseases. He charged incompetence among its staff physicians.

Capt. M. M. Barnard, veteran head of District penal institutions, last night declared "there's not a word of truth in the charges," and said he would welcome any investigation.

Cites "Galloping Bricks."

Shoemaker introduced a resolution asking for a Congressional investigation of the entire Federal prison system, including Lorton. The Minnesotan has served a term in the penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth for violation of the postal laws.

With a reference to "galloping brick," he said: "I deliberately charge that officials of the Lorton penitentiary make it their business to steal bricks that are manufactured by the convicts and dispose of them to private citizens."

He then read a letter from J. E. C. Bischoff, superintendent of industries at the prison, which ad-

Police Guarding 'Ding,' Noted Cartoonist, From Kidnapers

Des Moines, Feb. 15 (AP).—State police tonight guarded Jay N. Darling ("Ding"), nationally known newspaper cartoonist and sportsman, against reports that he was next on gangdom's list of intended kidnap victims.

Secrecy veiled investigation by State and Federal officers, but Federal Agent O. C. Dewey announced that evidence of a carefully planned plot to abduct Darling had been discovered.

In their efforts to provide every safeguard, the officers kept the cartoonist's whereabouts secret.

The purported plot was discovered while Darling was returning from Washington, where he attended a conference of President Roosevelt's wild life conservation committee.

A telegram, signed with a fictitious name, asked Darling when he would arrive in Chicago and where he would stay. Officers indicated they had traced the telegram to a supposed Chicago gangster.

Federal agents guarded Darling while he stopped in Chicago and escorted him to the Iowa border, where State officers joined him. Since his return to Des Moines last Wednesday, the State agents have been with him constantly.

A farmhouse near Creston, in southwest Iowa, figured in the purported plot, the officers believed. The farmhouse, definite location of which has not been determined, also was mentioned as the possible hideaway of the Edward G. Bremer kidnapers.

The officers indicated their belief that a definite ransom demand for Darling's release had been fixed in event the kidnaping was effected.

The announcement of the supposed plot was made, Dewey indicated, in the hope that publicity might serve as a warning and discourage attempt to carry out the abduction.

Darling, widely known for his cartoons in newspapers and magazines, also is prominent for his work in conservation of the Nation's wild life and his broad acquaintance in political fields.

Roosevelt Acts to Avert Rail Dispute

Owners and Labor Urged to Continue Wage Truce 6 Months.

Pay-Cut Warning Given by Lines, but Further Accord Expected.

By Raymond Clapper.

President Roosevelt acted last night to avert a railroad wage controversy which might interfere with progress toward recovery.

In a letter he called upon railway executives and labor leaders to extend for an additional six months their wage truce due to expire June 30.

If both sides respond favorably, as is expected, the present 10 per cent deduction now in effect on all classes of railway labor will be continued until January 1, 1935.

As a railroad wage war would involve possibly more than 950,000 employes and a total railroad pay roll of about $1,400,000,000, President Roosevelt feels it would have a most disturbing and unsettling effect.

Railroads Serve Notice.

Mr. Roosevelt made public his letter, dated February 14, a few hours after railroad executives in Chicago served notice on all railroad labor unions that they intended to institute a 15 per cent reduction in basic pay—as a substitute for the existing 10 per cent deduction—at the expiration of the present agreement June 30.

Railroad labor was prepared to fight any such proposal as contrary to the Administration recovery program based on increasing consumer purchasing power. Being the most numerous and highly organized of any labor group, and engaged in an essential industry, the railroad labor group was ready to resist with all of its power any threat to reduce its wage level, especially in view of the continued 10 per cent cent reduction to which it agreed last June to avoid embarrassment to the recovery program.

"Marked progress toward National recovery has been made since last June, and I am sure that the goal will be reached," Mr. Roosevelt said in his letter addressed to the Conference Committee of Managers representing Class I railroads and to the Railway Labor Executives Association.

Credit Not Yet Restored.

"Nevertheless much remains to be accomplished, the emergency still exists, and the country has not yet attained conditions of stability. There has been comparatively little change in the cost of living, but prices are unsettled and I am hopeful that they will rise generally to higher levels. The traffic of the railroads is improving, but their financial condition still is impaired and their credit has not yet been restored so far as private capital is concerned. Under present conditions the prosecution of a bitter controversy would have a most disturbing influence, and I am further convinced that conditions are not yet sufficiently stable to permit of a wise determination of what the wages should be for the future."

President Roosevelt added that he was confident that if the railroads and their employes could agree on an extension of the present agreement for at least six months, it would be of advantage

President Greets Latest Namesakes

Mother of 18 Names New Twins for Executive.

Mount Airy, Md., Feb. 15 (Spl.).—A proud woman is Mrs. John Myers, colored, of near here. She has a new set of twins and a letter of congratulation from President Roosevelt.

To Mrs. Myers, 36, were born twin boys—the third set. Naming the twins was difficult as the boys brought the number of the Myers' children to 18.

The problem was taken to Judge Clarence W. Murray. The judge suggested the President's name. So one was christened Franklin Roosevelt Myers and his brother Delano Roosevelt Myers.

Mrs. Myers received from President Roosevelt a silk handkerchief bearing the embroidered inscription: "Happy days—Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Princeton, Ind., Feb. 15 (AP).—Three persons burned in a crude oil explosion at Oatsville today died in the Methodist Hospital here. The victims were Mrs. Velma Clem, 33, and her two daughters, Maxine, 7, and Mary Lou, 4.

Mrs. Clem was pouring oil into a heating stove to kindle a fire when the explosion occurred.

Col. Brittin Drops Fight; Goes to Jail

"Broken by Action of Senate, Future Hit," He Enters Cell.

MacCracken Is Given Bond, to Serve if Appeal Loses.

L. H. Brittin, vice president of Northwest Airways, yesterday waived any right to appeal from the verdict of the Senate finding him guilty of contempt in connection with destruction of air mail records and began serving his 10-day sentence in the District Jail.

William P. MacCracken, jr., also sentenced to serve 10 days for contempt, was free on a $5,000 surety bond pending appeal to the Court of Appeals.

MacCracken has agreed that if he loses his appeal in the Appellate Court and in the United States Supreme Court he will surrender himself to the sergeant at arms of the Senate and serve his term without further controversy.

Brittin went to jail and MacCracken was freed on bond after they had spent the night in a hotel room in custody of Chesley Jurney, the Senate sergeant at arms.

"Broken," Brittin Feels.

Brittin decided to serve his sentence over protest of his attorney, Seth W. Richardson. Richardson issued this statement:

"I regret that Col. Brittin has definitely concluded to serve the sentence imposed by the Senate and not to avail himself of any further steps in connection with his legal rights. I have advised him, as I informed the Senate, that I think the Senate was without jurisdiction and that courts would ultimately free him from the sentence imposed.

"Col. Brittin feels that the necessary effects of the disapproval and condemnation expressed in the decision of the Senate so completely destroys both him and his future that it is idle to attempt to save anything from the wreck through legal proceedings.

"I do not think Col. Brittin intended to do anything wrong. I have no criticism of the Senate, although I regret its inability to see Col. Brittin in the light which I, as his intimate friend, saw him.

"I feel Col. Brittin has made a serious mistake in not pursuing his legal remedies, and I have so advised him. In my opinion, the interests of aviation have lost a very earnest, honest and far-sighted servant, who was about the last of the original pioneers of commercial aviation in America."

Brittin was charged with removing from MacCracken's files certain papers and correspondence which were under subpena from the Senate. MacCracken told the Senate that he had no knowledge that the papers were being taken. Brittin contended the papers were personal in nature.

Appeal Bond Allowed.

Appeal bond for MacCracken was allowed by Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, of the District Supreme Court. Justice O'Donoghue last Monday fined MacCracken $100 for contempt of his court after the court had ruled that MacCracken asked for a writ of habeas corpus at a time when he was not under arrest.

O'Donoghue later refused a writ of habeas corpus requested on the ground that MacCracken was being illegally restrained by the Senate.

The appeal will be from this latter ruling. Frank J. Hogan, attorney for MacCracken, will seek to settle the question of whether the Senate has a legal right to punish for a completed act. This is his basis for taking the case to the Court of Appeals. Hogan contends that the Senate has power only to

Daniell Sentenced To $500 or 30 Days

Penalty Follows Gas Bomb in Stock Exchange.

New York, Feb. 15 (AP).—Eugene S. Daniell, jr., Boston lawyer and Harvard graduate, was fined $500 today with the alternative of 30 days in Tombs Prison, for the tear gas bombing of the New York Stock Exchange last summer.

Principal witness against Daniell was Edward Mitchell, manager of the Stock Exchange building, who told how 2,000 members and employes had been forced from the floor by the fumes from a gas bomb placed in the ventilating system.

A probation officer informed the court that Daniell's motive was to attract attention to his National Independence Party.

3,000-Word Statement Defends Actions in 1930 Parleys.

Air Firm Controlled By General Motors

By Martha Dalrymple.

Former Postmaster General Brown last night issued a 3,000-word written denial of charges that air-mail contracts had been awarded with collusion and fraud, and at the same time prepared to appear Monday before the Black committee to present an oral defense of his position.

Over long-distance telephone from New York, the former Hoover Cabinet official, whose administration of air mail and ocean mail subsidies has been under fire for months, explained that his statement was called forth by a letter written yesterday by the present Postmaster General, James A. Farley, explaining why he had ordered the cancellation of all domestic air mail routes.

Brown further declared that he was "very eager and pleased" that his personal appearance before the Senate committee, which for months has listened to testimony about him, had finally been arranged.

Two Meetings Concerned.

The written statement centered primarily around two meetings in 1930, the so-called "spoils conferences," concerning which Brown pointed out:

"No suggestions of dividing air-mail operations among the companies represented at the May 19 and June 4 meetings was ever made or contemplated, and no suggestion with respect to bidding on air-mail contracts or refraining to bid on air-mail contracts was made at either of these meetings or at any other time."

Other developments during the day included:

Preparations by the Army to carry the air mail by pressing into service four Army Air Corps organizations with headquarters at Newark, N. J.

Col. L. H. Brittin began serving a ten-day sentence in jail for contempt of the Senate, but William P. MacCracken, his codefendant in charges of destruction of air-mail records was free on a $5,000 surety bond pending an appeal to the Court of Appeals.

Motor Interest Reported.

The Federal Trade Commission made a lengthy report to the Black Committee on the majority holdings of General Motors Corporation in the North American Aviation Corporation. The report revealed that the motor company

War Debt Cut Plan Dropped By President

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

President Roosevelt has been warned by his advisers that legislation proposing cancellation or downward revision of war debts would be overwhelmingly defeated by Congress, it was learned last night.

As a result of this advice, Mr. Roosevelt was reported to have abandoned, temporarily at least, plans for a message to Congress dealing with the $11,000,000,000 in war obligations owed this Government by foreign nations.

No information on the President's plans on this controversial subject was forthcoming from the White House. It was said only that Mr. Roosevelt was not at work now on war debt recommendations and no conferences on the matter with State Department authorities were in immediate prospect, though recently it was rumored in White House circles that the President hoped for debt revision soon.

The President, it was learned, has been told by Congressional lieutenants that the temper of the Nation, as reflected by Representatives in both Houses of Congress, definitely is opposed to any extension of leniency to foreign debtors at this time.

Even Mr. Roosevelt's great popu-

Silverman Bares Army Resale Pact

Two-Way Agreement for Buying of Surpluses Called "Fair."

By Felix Bruner.

While the grand jury investigating War Department contracts marked time awaiting arrival of more witnesses, Joseph Silverman, the only person mentioned thus far in connection with alleged irregularities, declared yesterday that he had entered into a two-way agreement with the department for purchase and sale of surplus materials.

It was also revealed that Silverman has retained as his attorney, A. Mitchell Palmer, Attorney General in the Wilson Cabinet.

The two-way contract, according to Silverman, was signed December 12 and provided that he should sell back to the department 700,000 undergarments at the same price for which he had previously bought them from the department, in exchange for an agreement to allow him to purchase other supplies.

He said he agreed to sell back the garments at 15⅝ cents apiece, compared with bids of his competitors averaging $1.20 a garment.

"In consideration of this very low price," Silverman said, "the War Department agreed to sell to the Breecot Corporation (of which Silverman is secretary) an assortment of articles which were surplus, or could have been declared surplus,

Yachting Party, Towed to Port, Tells How Sea Claimed Youth

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 15 (AP).—How a young man of 21, seeking adventure on his first ocean trip, lost his life attempting a task that might have tried the nerves and skill of an experienced seaman was told today when the storm-battered yacht Uvira docked for repairs.

Bringing with him a group of more than 30 who set out from Brooklyn last Friday to explore Central American waters, Jackson K. Dering, owner, described the tragedy which befell one of their number, Hubert Kuchenmeister, of Chicago, Tuesday, before the Coast Guard cutter Pontchartrain took his vessel in tow.

A gale broke a cleat and caused the yacht's main boom to swing wildly back and forth across the deck. In an effort to furl the sail, Kuchenmeister was attempting to untangle the iron rings on the mast, Mr. Dering said, "when suddenly a high sea swept him overboard."

"It was very cold, but he was able to grab hold of a life preserver. All hands were immediately set at the task of bringing the Uvira about. It was slow work. As we swung about chairs were tossed overboard in the hope they would assist in locating Hebert.

"But it was no use. When we finally managed to turn the vessel at least an hour had elapsed, and, although we searched the area for hours, we failed to find him."

Robert Kuchenmeister, brother of Hubert, was below decks when the tragedy occurred. Among other passengers were two women, Mrs. Dering, wife of the owner, who was making her first ocean voyage, and Miss Margaret Howse, of Chicago.

2 End Visit Here; Die in Auto Crash

Tragedy Comes on Trip to Florida.

Two women who left here Wednesday to drive to Florida after a visit with relatives in the Capital were killed, and three other persons injured in an auto collision near Kittrell, N. C., Wednesday night, according to word received yesterday.

The women killed were Mrs. George Baumeister and Mrs. Arthur Breaslin, both of West Brighton, N. Y. They had been guests of Mrs. Baumeister's brother-in-law, J. A. McNally, employe of the Interior Department.

Associated Press reports from Henderson, N. C., gave the names of the injured as Mayor George P. Dowling, of Audubon, N. J., his wife, and daughter, Mrs. Robert Kirland, of Philadelphia. Mr. and Mrs. Dowling suffered leg fractures and body lacerations. Mrs. Kirland has fractures of the leg, arm and wrist.

The New York women were in a small coupe which collided with Dowling's car. They died in a Henderson hospital without regaining consciousness.

Press Charges Czechoslovakia Aided Revolt

Italian Papers Declare Nation Supplied Arms and Backing.

Rome, Feb. 15 (AP).—A foreign office spokesman told the Associated Press tonight that Italy is for a rigid "hands-off" policy in the present Austrian situation.

The spokesman said Italy believes Chancellor Dollfuss so strengthened his position by dominating the Social-Democratic uprising that he may now be able to dispose of his differences with Nazi Germany without having to go to the League of Nations.

A sharp attack on Czechoslovakia, for allegedly supporting and arming Austrian Socialists for their insurrection, was launched today in the Italian press.

Government Behind Blast.

The unanimity of the broadside was interpreted as pointing to a government instigation of the attack. The newspapers referred also to what they said was the inexplainable attitude of France in the crisis.

The Associated Press was informed that Italy is not in agreement with the other powers on the advisability of bringing the Austro-German situation before the league.

She is convinced, an official spokesman said, that such a step would merely stir up muddy water and bring no beneficial results.

The wisest move the big powers could make now, according to the Italian thesis, would be to give Austria all possible economic aid.

For diplomatic reasons, no official statement was made with regard to the charges that Czechoslovakia assisted the Austrian Socialists.

Roberto Forges-Davanzati, editor of La Tribuna, concerned himself with these charges in his daily news broadcast tonight.

In his talk, which was believed based on semiofficial information, he used the word "complicity" in referring to Czechoslovakia, and said France and the Little Entente were responsible to a lesser extent for directly or indirectly aiding the Socialists in Austria.

Called Italian Victory.

The victory of Dollfuss was regarded here as a triumph for the Italian viewpoint as against that of France and her allies. Italy has maintained that the Dollfuss government was best able to hold the country together and prevent an Anschluss.

France, or at least strong French political factions, it was said here, favored supporting the Austrian Socialists because of a greater confidence in their enmity toward Hitlerism and a union with Nazi Germany.

The Italians do not share the fear, said to exist in France and the Little Entente, that Dollfuss may eventually reconcile his strong Fascist leanings with Hitlerism or agree to an anschluss.

Il Lavoro Fascista said:

"That dear Czechoslovakia is so jealous of the independence of Austria and is so ready to undertake this cause of Geneva to The Hague (World Court)—who, then, sent arms and munitions to Social Democrats and Social Communists in Austria!

"As long as the governments of certain large and small powers insist on the independence of Austria and at the same time, even though with indirect means, hinder the work of the Austrian government directed precisely toward the maintaining of this independence, diplomatic negotiations and deliverance at Geneva will remain a dead letter."

75,000 Troops Near Border.

Meanwhile, Italian troops, estimated to number 75,000, were stationed at strategic points near the Austrian frontier prepared for any emergency, but persons in a position to know asserted no concentration order had been given recently.

The troops had been gradually moved toward the border over a five-month period.

Fascist frontier guards, who have been reinforced, continued to maintain a vigilant watch along the frontier to prevent members of the outlawed Republican guard from crossing into Italy from Austria.

Dispatches from Verona said hundreds of these men were in flight, and it was believed some might be headed toward Italy.

The Giornale d'Italia, reputedly a frequently used government mouthpiece, called for "the return of some states to a precise sense of their responsibilities and to a greater discipline and sincerity of action."

Support of Socialism.

It added that Austrian Socialism had the support of political parties as well as of countries and that it found reason for its force and aggression in the support that came to it from governments.

Referring to Czechoslovakia, the newspaper asserted:

"Proofs of this are found in the spoken encouragement given Austrian Socialism against Chancellor Dollfuss in more than one newspaper in Rome and in more than one country.

"They also are found in the origin of part of the abundant warlike material with which the Socialists fortified their fortresses.

"They are found, moreover, in the direction of the flights taken by the heads of Austrian socialism."

The Giornale added that Chancellor Dollfuss now can count more than ever on the growing cordiality of various powers, particularly Italy.

German Papers Bitter.

Berlin, Feb. 15 (AP).—German newspapers fired a volley of bitter criticism today against the radio appeal of Chancellor Dollfuss for support in Austria.

"With this appeal," said the Boersen Zeitung, "Dollfuss has delivered an historic document of mendacity which hitherto has rarely been observed among responsible statesmen."

This newspaper called it "boldness to appeal to the Austrian people at a moment when the morgues there are filled with dead workmen for whose state Dollfuss is responsible."

After Smoke of Battle Cleared

This photograph, telephotoed from Vienna to London and then sent by radio to the Associated Press in New York, illustrates the tremendous damage done by government howitzers in the battle against the Social Democrats. It shows the front of the Karl Marx Apartment Building, where Socialists fought government troops, the latter finally resorting to heavy artillery fire, the result of which is shown. This engagement was one of the hottest of the battle in Vienna, many being killed.

vincial districts were conflicting, but, nevertheless, seemed to indicate the government was nearing an end in its efforts to curb the civil war.

Betrayed, Declares Prince.

The home-guard leader, Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg, declared in a funeral oration for a fallen comrade that "the blame that so much blood had to be spilled rests with democratic corruptionist politicians * * * who betrayed the native population of this country with their shameless bickerings with the Reds."

Never since the Fascist Heimwehr entered the Dollfuss cabinet has the tension between home guard and the Christian Social wings of the government come to such a critical stage.

"Back to the Parliament!" was the cry of deputies of Dollfuss's own party. It was a flat negation of everything the Heimwehr has been fighting for.

If Dollfuss listens to his party colleagues and resurrects Parliament, the home guard would be faced with the choice of ousting the chancellor by a putsch, or of meekly taking a smashing defeat to its prestige.

On the other hand, there were many who believed Dollfuss would throw his party colleagues overboard and take the Heimwehrmen into the cabinet to steer a 100 per cent Fascist course.

Nazi Putsch Expected Soon.

Adding to the tension was a speech broadcast from Munich tonight by the Nazi leader, Theodore Habicht, to the effect that Austrian Nazis were "prepared for action."

Rumors circulated that a Nazi putsch could be expected this weekend.

Nearly all units of the Socialist Republican army were reported defeated and scattered, and Vienna's monuments to the 1918 republic were again gay with red, white and blue bunting—the Austrian colors—and pictures of Chancellor Dollfuss.

The government claimed complete victory, but while Socialists were battered out of their Vienna strongholds, reports of conditions in the provinces left many gaps.

Reports from sources friendly to the Socialists said Socialists from Tulin and Sankktpoelten were converging in the woods in the direction of Vienna, and that Republican Guards were still active in the Neuenkirchen and Gloggnitz industrial centers.

2,000 Socialists Surrender.

In suburban Laaberg, 2,000 Socialists surrendered following Chancellor Dollfuss' amnesty decree, and troopers captured the huge Goethehof Municipal apartments, an insurgents' stronghold.

Von Starhemberg blamed Gov. Joseph Schlegel for the uprising. The governor, a Christian Socialist, was charged by the prince with having "hindered and sabotaged the struggle against Marxism in Austria year after year."

The general impression tonight was that the government was easily mastering the final phase of military action, that of "mopping up" guerrilla bands, but opinions were divided as to the repercussions of the last few days' disorders, not only on popular feeling here, but on sympathies abroad.

Some professed to think that the Dollfuss government was immensely strengthened by the firm anti-Socialist action, and predicted that Nazis will think twice before venturing on any aggressive course.

Another opinion was that the chancellor henceforth must go willy-nilly where the Fascist Heimwehr leads.

Still others viewed the government's chances of survival as dubious on the ground that no government so closely connected with such terrible episodes as the cannonading of the Floridsdorf workers' section can escape the necessity of making way for new names not associated with those bitter memories.

Nazis Hope for Compromise.

Nazis were said to feel that they have a good chance of turning out a compromise between militant Socialists on the Left, and the utterly and ruthlessly Fascist Right.

The death toll in the civil war remained indefinite tonight, but was still estimated to include 1,000 to 1,500, pending the issuance of official figures.

The government's propaganda bureau made vigorous efforts to win sympathy of working classes.

Handbills advising workers that Dollfuss remained their "real friend" were scattered from airplanes, and the same statement was on the Monument to the Republic.

Government forces finally gained the Goethehof, only to find that its garrison comprised women and children and that the men who earlier had answered troopers' bombardments with machine gun fire had fled, presumably to Socialist rendezvous outside Vienna.

Through the wreckage in the workers' sections, the steel-helmeted government squads moved, block by block, cleaning up remnants of the opposition.

In the same way, loyal detachments were dispatched to nearby towns to quash guerrilla bands and to proceed in this way toward Steyr and Linz, seats also of continuing battles, as Socialists were reported in possession of strategic emplacements on nearby hills.

3 More Go to Gallows.

Three terrorists, meanwhile, were sent to the gallows, but the death sentence of a fourth was revoked by President Miklas, either because he was tired of bloodshed, it was said, or because of fears of unfavorable reactions among government supporters.

Authorities who investigated the death of Alice Borowetz, 17, daughter of a New York restaurateur, found that she died of brain fever Tuesday, and was not a victim of rioting as was reported. She entered a hospital Saturday.

The number of imprisoned Socialists, meanwhile, increased, and more than 2,000 were in jail. Courts-martial of their leaders continued, with at least three condemned to death.

With the capture of the George Washington and Indian Court apartments, in which many workers' families lived, the part women played in the uprising was more fully revealed.

Women operated machine guns and hurled grenades from those huge structures, helped male defenders, and carried ammunition. When the apartments were taken by loyal troops, a garrison only of women emerged.

Socialist circulars urged party members to "remember your murdered and assassinated brethren in the Third Reich," and "think of the destruction of social rights and acquisitions by Nazi-ism."

A Jewish Telegraphic Agency dispatch attended to an appeal of the Lower Austria Government, and said "the fight is being carried out in order to make Austria a free Christian Country."

Note of Nationalism.

It added that "this is the first time that the note of nationalism has been introduced into the battle with the Austrian Socialists," and that Jewish merchants were refused credit by the Vienna Municipal Bank.

All foreign newspapers were confiscated from the news vending monopoly by police. Other officers seized foreign publications in cafes.

Police turned back automobiles carrying flowers for graves in the central cemetery. Burials of street fighting victims started.

In an appeal to the nation, Dollfuss offered amnesty to all except leaders of the movement if they stopped fighting before noon.

Desultory fighting continued during the morning but government guns were silent here pending the revolutionaries' answer. Socialists in Linz were given until midnight to surrender.

Detachments of soldiers and Fascist Heimwehr men were hurried to Ebensee after workers in government salt plants went on strike and seized public buildings there.

Bayonets Menace Women.

Police, with fixed bayonets, herded women out of the Goethehof neighborhood, while four companies of machine gunners hurried to do battle with their menfolk in the Kagran sector.

Meanwhile, the Floridsdorf factory section and other nearby Socialist strongholds were areas of smoke-blackened buildings, wrecked homes and littered streets.

In their first estimate of casualties, Socialists placed the number of their dead in the bombardments of Floridsdorf and Karl Marx apartment building at 600. This does not include the military and police losses and deaths in other sections.

Austria Seeks Britain's Aid For Autonomy

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

London, Feb. 15 (U.P.).—Austria sought today to draw Great Britain into a proposed tripower guarantee of her independence.

Britain's attitude on the project, which would serve in lieu of the League of Nations' intervention against Nazi attempts to unite Austria and Germany, was conjectural. France and Italy are believed warmly inclined toward some such agreement.

The plea for British cooperation was carried to the foreign office by the Austrian Minister, Baron George Frankenstein. He pointed out to Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, that the latter already had stated the British government favored an independent Austria, and urged that Britain join with France and Italy in a move to prevent interference from other powers in Austria's domestic affairs.

Limit to British Action.

Simon recently let it be known the government was prepared to send representations to Germany should the Nazis there take active part in the Austrian Nazi movement, banned by Chancellor Dollfuss. However, events this week have caused a revulsion of feeling against Dollfuss in public opinion here.

Furthermore, the British government is not inclined to become embroiled in political affairs on the Continent at this dangerous period. Britain is prepared to push peace moves, such as disarmament, but whether she would be inclined to add her strength to any forceful action against Nazi Germany remained extremely doubtful.

Italy and France, on the other hand, are eager to prevent combination of Austria with Germany, as demanded by Chancellor Hitler. Hitler's insistence on such an eventual "Anschluss," uniting Central Europe into a strong Germanic state, is the reason for Italy's and France's fears.

It is understood a proposal for three-power action, originating in Rome, would be placed before the British government before the end of the week. Conversations in all three capitals are proceeding, with not only Austria, but France and Italy, bringing pressure to bear on London to join in strong, concerted action guaranteeing Austria's sovereignty, it was understood.

Italy recently agreed to send an army into Austria in the event of a Nazi revolution, and Dollfuss, in return, moved toward establishing Austria as an Italian-Fascist, rather than a German-Nazi, state.

France fears a strong union of Vienna and Berlin, and her statesmen have been considering formally proposing organization of an international army composed of units from England, France and Italy, to be placed at Dollfuss' disposal. It is doubtful that Britain would cooperate in any such warlike move, although willing to make sharp representations to Berlin in conjunction with the other powers.

Czechs Cannot Stay Passive.

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Feb. 15 (U.P.).—A declaration that Czechoslovakia would not "remain passive" should foreign powers send troops into Austria was made before the parliamentary foreign affairs committee by Acting Foreign Minister Camill Krofta today.

Referring to rumors that both Hungary and Italy were concentrating troops on the Austrian frontiers, Krofta warned of the possible international consequences of fighting in Austria, and asserted:

"If any foreign power enters Austrian territory, Czechoslovakia can not remain passive."

Krofta added that "this does not mean that Czechoslovakia would send troops, but would invoke the League of Nations to restore order through concerted action."

Sixty armed members of the Austrian Socialist Schutzbund crossed the frontier at Ungereingen. They were disarmed immediately, and interned.

Walsh's Widow Seeks Division of His Estate

Helena, Mont., Feb. 15 (AP).—A petition seeking distribution of a part of the estate of the late Senator Thomas J. Walsh was filed in District court today by his widow, Nieves Maria Perez de Abreu y Chaumont Walsh.

Mrs. Walsh asked that $80,000 of $89,000 in United States Government bonds in the estate be divided equally between her and the Senator's daughter, Mrs. Genevieve Walsh Gudger.

Missouri Prison Break Frustrated

Three Surrender as Guard Fires Shotgun.

Jefferson City, Mo., Feb. 15 (AP).—A second escape attempt at the Missouri State prison within two days was frustrated today when a guard halted three convicts trying to get over the northeast wall.

The trio had sawed their way out of their cell block and were attempting to throw a rope with a hook on the end over the wall when J. J. Brightwell, a tower guard, heard the disturbance.

Brightwell fired once with a shotgun. The convicts surrendered and were placed in solitary confinement.

Senate to Open Economy Act Battle Monday

Administration Hopes to Defeats Higher Pensions and Federal Pay.

The fight over restoration of Government salaries and increased benefits for veterans will begin on the floor of the Senate Monday under an agreement reached yesterday.

Postponment of consideration of controversial features of the independent offices appropriation bill was proposed by Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, in charge of the bill, at the suggestion of Senator Charles L. McNary (Republican), of Oregon, minority leader.

Provisions of the bill for funds for the railroad valuation work of the Interstate Commerce Commission and for the Civil Service Commission also were passed over as the Senate sped through the rest of the bill, approving all other committee amendments without argument.

Increased appropriations for the Civil Service Commission to permit personnel surveys are being sought by Senator Kenneth J. McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, and it was at his instance thta the commission sections of the bill were left for future consideration.

Except for these and the economy sections, the bill was approved as reported by the committee. It carries a totak of $588,001,548 as compared with appropriations amounting to $625,642,286 for the current fiscal year. A $21,592,205 increase voted for veterans is not enough to please friends of veterans and there will be a series of amendments offered to increase pensions. Administration leaders are hopeful they can holti sufficient votes to beat down attacks on their veterans program and the move to restore Government salaries in full July 1.

Children at Play Overcome by Gas

Girls, 6 and 8, Are Revived by Rescue Squad.

A childish game nearly ended tragically yesterday when two little girls were overcome by gas as they played in the basement of one of their homes.

The children are Mary Lee Ispoli, 6, of 205 Bryant street northwest, and Lee Francis, 8, of 204 Channing street northeast. They were playing in the basement at the latter address.

Parents saw the frightened and gasping Francis emerge from the cellar. She lost consciousness as she was about to tell of the other girl's plight.

Rushing downstairs, the Ispoli child was found unconscious. They were taken to the outdoors and fire rescue squad was summoned. Both were revived quickly. Police said fumes were escaping from a leaky heater.

Boston, Feb. 15 (AP).—Charles Ponzi, notorious swindler, was released from custody of immigration officials today after he had furnished $1,000 bond.

He will be at liberty for 90 days pending an appeal to Federal authorities from the Government's plans to deport him to Italy.

Coast Guard Reaches Tangier As Island Food Supplies Fail

Chesapeake Community Cut Off for Week by Heavy Ice.

Crisfield, Md., Feb. 15 (AP).—The Coast Guard boat Patsy broke through a field of ice today and landed badly-needed supplies of food and fuel on Tangier Island, where for more than a week, 2,000 persons have been cut off from the world.

At the same time, the Patsy released five boats from the ice in Tangier Harbor and three proceeded here immediately for supplies, newspapers, and mail. The other two were oyster boats.

The Patsy had failed several times earlier in the week in her efforts to carry supplies to Tangier.

Taking relief to the island, which is located in the lower Chesapeake Bay, followed closely on the rescue yesterday of seven persons by a lighthouse tender. They had started out from Tangier from Crisfield, but after an hour's efforts were forced to turn back.

Among the seven was H. A. Wise, superintendent of schools of Accomac County, Va.

In describing the situation, he said fear on the island was beginning to mount as boats failed to break through with supplies.

"Merchants carry only small stocks of fuel and food," he said, "and after seven days, supplies were running low. Although there was no undue suffering, all fresh meats and other fresh foods had been eaten, and only small supplies of staples remained.

"The islanders depend on regular trips from the mainland for food and fuel.

"People were wondering what had happened to the cutside world. There were no connections of any sort and no newspapers or mail had reached the island."

Grip Tightened Upon Deputies By Doumergue

Premier Limits Debate to Obtain Early Budget.

Paris, Feb. 15 (AP).—Armed with authority from the Chamber of Deputies, Premier Gaston Doumergue and his "political truce" cabinet took firm command of France today.

The Chamber gave the government an overwhelming vote of confidence as "Papa" Doumergue shut off all debate until the budget for 1934 is voted.

Singing the Marellaise and cheering the 71-year-old leader in the national emergency, deputies from virtually all parts of the Chamber drowned out the cries of the Communists and Socialists and deluged their protests under a flood of favorable votes.

"Days Instead of Months."

Winning the support of all but 193 deputies out of 595, the vigorous old premier told Parliament exactly what it must do now and how it must do it. He ordered all debate eliminated until the budget is approved, and he changed a law, old as the Republic itself, to enable passage of the measure in a few days instead of a period of months.

Communist members howled "assassin" and broke into the strains of the Internationale as M. Doumergue, talking in an amiable but firm manner, admonished Parliment to cease its tactics of interference with national welfare, warning that "peace among the French" is vital, for otherwise the country would lose respect at home and abroad.

Socialists joined Communists in opposing what they termed dictatorial methods on the part of the new government, and demanded, unsuccessfully, the dissolution of Parliament to permit new elections.

Police Encircle Parliament.

While the Premier spoke, heavy lines of police encircled the chamber, guarded all parts of the building, and kept streets leading to the building clear.

"I am not premier through any ambition," M. Doumergue declared, as he made the pronouncement that he would not discuss any interpellations on government policies until after passage of the budget bill.

"President Lebrun telephoned me from Paris that blood was flowing, and I came, at his request, to do what I could to halt it," he said, as cheering broke out, adding: "If you deputies are not either blind or deaf you ought to know what is going on."

A vote was called, with the stipulation that it be one of confidence in the premiere and his cabinet. The voting, accompli ed to the accompaniment of howls from the Leftists, showed 402 deputies favored the program of hard-fisted authority. 125 opposed it and 68 abstained from participating in the balloting.

Socialists See Fascist Link.

Shutting off of debate on the budget was ordered for the main purpose of "safeguarding the money" and restoring calm for "the nation's safety".

Oppositionists declared Doumergue was determined to master Parliament "with an iron hand and a velvet glove." Socialists claimed the "political truce cabinet was formed with the helping hand of the Fascists."

These accusations failed to halt the premier. He stated that "a moral house-cleaning is urgent and requires voluntary discipline. It requires competence and a sense of authority in those who govern. It requires observance of duty by those who are governed."

A "truce of parties" was the aim of the cabinet he formed, he said, and this truce was necessary for the accomplishment of the chief points of his program, swift justice in the Bayonne Bank scandal, passage of the budget, a revival of business and a firm stand in foreign affairs.

Unable to Alter Tax Bill, House Talks About It

Two Committees Fight for 11 Measures to Levy on U. S. Securities.

Powerless to alter one syllable of the $258,000,000 income tax revision bill, House members yesterday talked on, undismayed, at the rate of $55 per page in the Congressional Record.

For the same rule that denied them the right to amend the tax bill allotted 16 hours for fruitless debate.

The talking will continue until Tuesday, when the House will go through the motions of a vote o the bill, which was passed to all intents and purposes Wednesday when the "gag" was adopted.

Meanwhile, two important committees fought for jurisdiction over 11 bills to tax Government securities, and a new move was launched in the House for publicity of income tax returns.

Through the Ways and Means Committee, the Treasury let it be known that it looked with disfavor on proposals to tax Federal issues at a time when heavy Government bond issues must be floated.

Patman Demands Tax Publicity.

A Ways and Means Committee motion to wrest jurisdiction from the Judiciary Committee, which had planned to hold hearings on the 11 bills, was pending before the House.

Chairman Gordon Browning, of Judiciary sub-committee No. 3, said last night proposed hearings have been called off until the House disposes of the Ways and Means resolution. He served notice he would fight it. The Ways and Means Committee wants the bills so it can safely table them for this session.

Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, in a speech on the floor called on the Ways and Means Committee to vote out an amendment to the tax bill forcing publicity of all income tax returns.

He said present methods of secrecy were responsible for former Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon collecting millions of dollars in refunds, and J. P. Morgan and Charles E. Mitchell avoiding income tax payments.

Minority May Offer One Change.

Representative Allen T. Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee, took the floor in opposition, arguing it would put valuable information in the hands of competitive corporations.

The Ways and Means Committee alone has the right to offer amendments to the tax bill, but up until adjournment last night, none had been forthcoming.

Speculation turned last night on what change in the bill will be offered in the one motion to recommit which the minority has the right to put forward when action on the bill is completed. Proposals ranged from a sales tax substitute for existing nuisance levies, to a move to repeal the proposed excise levies in the pending bill.

Jury Commissioners' Work Nears Finish

Anderson, of Falls Church; J. B. Parnell, of Mount Vernon, and D. W. Buckley, jr., of Clifton, are selecting the names of residents of the county that will be summoned for jury duty during the year.

The New Dealers

—The Low Down on the Higher Ups—

Swope Proposed NRA in 1931

Industrialist Saw Peril to U. S. in Cut-Throat Competition.

Success Brings 'Fascism' Plan, Raising Rumpus Over Nation.

By the Unofficial Observer.

Gerard Swope's suggestion in 1931 of an NRA in embryo was a really statesmanlike proposal and came from an industrialist who was aware that cut-throat competition—part of which was at the expense of labor—was bound to undermine the efforts of the big companies to stabilize production and employment and to protect their men. The proposal also reflected his realization that the popular opposition to Big Business was so powerful that it was insane to demand—as some of our purblind bankers were demanding—that the anti-trust laws be repealed. In short, Swope saw the need of direct social controls as a substitute for the clumsy anti-trust legislation and was ready to accept those controls.

Industrial self government under Federal supervision was the essence of the Swope plan, and it became the essence of the NRA.

Economic Fascist Plan Raises Rumpus in U.S.

In the autumn of 1933, when big business had tasted enough profit to become restive under NRA regulations which had enabled them to obtain that profit, Swope came out with a plan for the future of the NRA as a species of economic Fascism: industrial self government, heading up into a sort of general industrial council. This raised a rumpus from coast to coast. Swope had completely misjudged the public mind and explained later that this was only the first part of his plan, for he also proposed a parellel labor organization—two columns joined at the top. Thus Swope emerges as the prophet of a cartelized industrial order. His plan is all right, so far as it goes, but it still reflects the psychology of an economy based on production.

Swope Injects Brains Into "Cliff-Dwellers."

Without the help of Swope and a handful of men like him, the NRA would never have been attempted. Secretary Roper promptly made him chairman of his Business Advisory and Planning Council and appointed him to the NRA Industrial Advisory Board. Contrary to general impressions, Swope was not chairman of the latter body—Walter C. Teagle of the Standard Oil of New Jersey held down the job—but Swope was the key man of the group. While Hugh Johnson cracked down and warmed up, Swope worked like a beaver behind the scenes to introduce a glimmer of reason into the armor-plated brain-pans of some of our industrial cliff-dwellers.

It was Swope really—and not Hugh Johnson—who broke the deadlock between the captive coal mine workers and the U. S. Steel Corporation at a critical moment in the summer of 1933. Johnson had tried and failed. Roosevelt backed up Johnson, and sent him to try again. Again Johnson failed and it looked as if the bloody warfare in the Frick mines might spread into a general labor conflagration.

Finally Swope got hot with a telephone and made the feudal fossils of the steel industry realize that they had better go to Washington and make their peace while peace was still to be had.

He carried his labor activities still farther and, joining Senator Wagner on the National Labor Board, did some very effective work in reasoning with the employers. Bob Wagner, as legislative champion of social justice, had been the spear-head of the Congressional fight to help the unemployed and had been the sponsor of NIRA on Capitol Hill. Wagner and Swope made a good team, although diverse in origin and social viewpoint.

Self-Made Wagner Retains Sympathy for Underdog.

Wagner, 60 years of age, had come to this country as a child from Germany and had fought his way up from the city streets, via the night school and Tammany route to power. He was one of Boss Murphy's liberal young Democrats in the pre-war era—Al Smith was another—and was a self-made man who, unlike many who have risen from the ranks, retained his sympathy for the underdog. After 15 years in New York politics, in 1919 he received a seat on the bench of the New York State Supreme Court, where he remained until his election to the United States Senate in 1926.

In the Senate, he promptly committed the blasphemy of taking up the study of unemployment, a subject which was politely ignored in that golden era of "Coolidge prosperity." Wagner was somewhat startled to discover that even then there was three or four million unemployed and that nothing was being done about it.

In cooperation with Senators Costigan and LaFollette he helped to draft and put through the Senate the great recovery measures of 1933: NIRA, with its $3,300,000,000 public works program; the $500,000,000 Federal Emergency Relief Administration; the emergency farm mortgage refinancing system, system, and the Federal employthe Federal employment exchange ment stabilization board for public-works planning. Not bad for a little German newsboy who started the long battle for a bare living in the Manhattan of Richard Croker in the gilded age of municipal politics.

Wagner Opposes Labor Resorting to Strikes.

At first, the NRA went its way without him, but when it ran head-on into labor troubles in the mid-summer of 1933, Wagner's great job came when he was made chairman of the National Labor Board. There he devoted himself to preserving industrial peace. Until the Weirton case came along, he succeeded pretty well, although he and his board were tremendously overworked and there were numerous complaints because so many members of the board were frequently absent and had to rely on reading the transcript of testimony in reaching their decisions.

Wagner's significance in the NRA picture is that he is the first Senator at Washington who has represented industrial liberalism rather than agrarian liberalism.

It is interesting to note Wagner's faith in the ability of the Government to reconcile the conflict between capital and labor. Perhaps the NRA would have moved faster and real wages would have risen more rapidly if Wagner had encouraged labor to use the strike. Instead, he discouraged the strike and has been urging the conversion of the National Labor Board into a sort of industrial labor court with power to enforce its decisions.

Organized Labor Faltering When NRA Was Born.

Short, plump, brisk and twinkling in manner, with a large head, a friendly manner and a well-trained man, Wagner is the last man in the world who would correspond to the current American notion of a Fascist. That, however, is only because the basic principle of Fascism has been clouded by prejudice and emotion. Stripped of its political aggressiveness and its accidental intolerance, Fascism is an attempt to apply the syndicalist principle to all economic elements in the modern capitalistic state and to bring under a new regime of law and administration those great areas of economic conflict which parliamentary democracy proved unable to control or pacify. As the NRA proceeds, under the guidance of four men so dissimilar as Johnson, Richberg, Swope and Wagner, it is becoming obvious that the only force which can lift it above the merely Fascist level of collective principles and collusive practices, lies neither in industry nor in labor, but in the development of the interest of the consumer as a corrective to both the dollar-snatching industrialist and the dime-grabbing laborer.

The NRA, with its guarantee of the right of collective bargaining and its challenge of the open shop and the company union, was the most welcome event in the history of American labor. A new and deadly struggle for power over labor promptly broke out, as William Green, president of federation; John L. Lewis, head of the miners; Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, and Leo Wolman, the labor economist of Columbia University, took a firm grip on the Labor Advisory Board established by President Roosevelt to deal with the epidemic of strikes which raged through the summer of 1933.

Green, "Baptist Deacon," Avoids Making Enemies.

Green is the complacent "Baptist Deacon" of organized labor, an old man of 61, and, like the late Warren Gamaliel Harding, a native of Ohio. Like Lewis, he is a coal miner, who has come up through the ranks by means of labor politics. At the age of 27 he became a sub-district president of the United Mine Workers of America, and later became president of the organization's Ohio district. He entered politics on the Democratic side, serving two terms in the Ohio Legislature, and has been a delegate or alternate to several Democratic National Conventions. From 1913 to 1925, he was international secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers and in 1924, after the death of Samuel Gompers, he was elected president of the A. F. of L., with the help of John L. Lewis. He has held the post ever since and will hold it as long as Lewis lets him.

He is a good man for the job, as he has avoided making enemies—Lewis is always in a fight—and is mild mannered and phlegmatic in temperament. If he had stayed in Democratic politics he would probably have reached the United States Senate, by the Harding route, as he is a friendly conciliator rather than a leader.

Under his benevolent auspices the federation reached a new all-time low from which it was only rescued by the NRA. Even so, the federation failed to make the most of its new opportunity. Its membership increased rapidly, but it requires little imagination to see that, had a man of real force been its leader, it could have converted labor to an organized interest parallel to the organized interest of capital in industry.

Green is not a force, although his qualities are not wholly negative. He is honest and sincere and undoubtedly has the interest of labor, as he sees it, at heart. But his vision is limited.

Nearsighted Leaders Frame A. F. L. Policy.

The truth is that Green is a middle-of-the-road routine politician. The federation pretends to represent all labor—in fact, it is only representative of a comparatively small sector of skilled industrial labor and doesn't give a darn for casual or unskilled labor. All of Green's major positions have been dictated by the most obvious type of political expediency. The real powers in the federation are a gang of pot-bellied international presidents; some of them honest, many of them hard fighters, nearly all of them nearsighted. It is easy to write off Green as a total loss until you consider Matthew Woll—a fire-eating, Red Scaremonger and ardent supporter of all the tenets of medieval capitalism—and then you heave a sigh of gratitude for Bill Green.

Green has always been a Democrat, and though the federation professes neutrality between the parties, the bulk of its membership is also Democrat. Green played good politics with the Roosevelt election, giving Roosevelt's labor record in New York his unstinted praise.

The election placed Green in a dilemma. He might have been the A. F. of L. candidate for Secretary of Labor, but that would have meant resigning a well-paid steady job which he probably would never get back. Instead, he backed Daniel J. Tobin, head of the teamsters' union, for the Cabinet job. When Roosevelt passed over Tobin and appointed Perkins, Green sulked.

He openly announced that labor would never become reconciled to this choice and the federation embarked on a more or less open policy of sabotaging the New Deal. Within three months, Perkins had Green Lewis and most of the rest of them in her camp. She had more intelligence than all of them put together.

Tomorrow—John L. Lewis, Labor's Fighter.

Exchange Aid Admits Need Of Regulation

(Associated Press.)

Piling up testimony to support his case for governmental regulation of the securities markets, Ferdinand Pecora, counsel for the Senate Banking Committee, yesterday drew from the chairman of the New York Stock Exchange's listing committee an assertion that it had been repeatedly misled by corporations seeking to get their shares on the big board.

Frank A. Altschul, the exchange official, agreed with the attorney that this had been the case not only with stock of the American Commercial Alcohol Corporation, the rise and fall of which was under investigation, but also with General Theater Equipment and Kreuger & Toll issues.

Circumstances Aired.

The circumstances surrounding new issues of stock in the alcohol concern, Altschul said, first came to his attention in testimony presented yesterday and was of such a nature that he had wired the exchange to cancel permission granted the corporation for another new issue, which the company had delayed placing on the market.

The reasons the canceled issue had not been offered, Pecora later told newspapermen, would furnish an interesting story which it was his intention to bring out today, in further questioning of Russell R. Brown, chairman of the board of American Commercial Alcohol.

While the sessions of the Banking Committee are a continuation of its long investigation of stock exchanges, it now has before it the Fletcher-Rayburn bill to place them under Government supervision and it is Pecora's intention to show that supervision is needed by presenting evidence that the stock exchange has not adequately protected the interests of the public.

Asks About Examples.

Mentioning General Theater Equipment, which the committee previously learned had shown a write-up of $4,000,000 to $24,000,000, and the Kreuger & Toll fiasco, Pecora asked Altschul:

"With those examples behind you—weren't they of a character to cause your committee to inquire into a situation where not even a balance sheet of the corporation was available?" He referred to the American Commercial Alcohol case.

"The cases were not analagous," Altschul contended.

Pecora then quoted Richard Whitney, president of the Stock Exchange, as saying in a speech that the exchange's listing requirements were "the most searching in the world."

"That is correct," said Altschul.

"Did you apply those searching methods to Kreuger & Toll," he asked.

"We are constantly seeking to plug loopholes," the witness replied.

Code Extension Urged in Final Labor Session

Delegates From 44 States Hear Job Assurance Bill Outlined.

Bringing their two-day session to a close, delegates to the conference on labor problems called here by Secretary of Labor Perkins yesterday recommended that National Recovery Administration codes be extended beyond the life of the NRA as a permanent part of the National economic structure.

The meeting, attended by labor delegates and State labor officials of 44 States, also urged "judicious but strict enforcement" of wage, hours and working condition provisions of existing codes through inspection facilities of State labor departments.

After hearing reports from various committees, the meeting yesterday approved a large group of resolutions on labor conditions and heard addresses from Representative David Lewis, of Maryland, co-author of the unemployment reserves bill, and John Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers.

Outlining the main points in the bill now before Congress, Representative Lewis said that the industrial order "must accept its obligation to support our part of the human family, and to do this it must administer the employment asset as a trust for willing, competent workers."

The advantages brought by NRA for mine workers was outlined by John Lewis.

In addition to action on the NRA program, the conference voted on participation in the International Labor Conference and International Labor Office, the United States Employment Service, old age pensions and housing.

On old age pensions, the conference recommended that a sufficient sum should be provided by States to maintain old age pensions which would yield at least $360 a year.

The Wagner-Lewis bill was indorsed.

Administration Weighs Direct Air Subsidies

Plan Considered to Push Development of Industry.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Serious thought was being given last night by the Administration to providing direct financial aid to aviation so as to encourage the continued development of the passenger carrying branch of the industry.

Those familiar with the plans said the adoption of such a policy, similar in a way to that President Roosevelt favors for dealing with ocean carriers, would answer charges that the Government's abrogation of mail contracts was a blow at the progress of an industry into which millions of capital and scores of lives had gone.

The direct subsidy plan still was in a tentative state, however, with much study and detail remaining to be done.

Generally, however, the plan followed the line of the European "bounty" system, through which both ocean and air service has been built up.

Development Is Final Goal.

Those studying its application to the American aviation industry say it should take into consideration such factors as the public service rendered, rate differentials and other economic factors, linking them to the general objective of constant development and the final goal of an air and ocean fleet of military value in event of war.

President Roosevelt a few days ago said Federal aid to shipping should be given, and called it by the name of subsidy.

Secretary Roper epitomized the contract subsidy plan when he said that "the subsidy feature as applied even to the carrying of the mail was prompted by an effort to develop civil aviation rather than to provide primarily a means of carrying the mail."

Two Alternatives Exist.

Two alternatives exist for the air-mail contract system, under which the subsidy is paid. One would be a continuation of governmental operation of the mail carrying lines, to begin Tuesday when the Army takes over the job temporarily. The other is to hire the mail carried at a flat poundage rate.

A clew as to what might happen to some of the airlines was seen in the report yesterday that two railroads were negotiating for the purchase of the Northwest Airways, involving the Great Northern and Northern Pacific.

Law Forbids Rebidding.

Under the law, existing companies are forbidden to bid again for contracts for a five-year period. Thus a new concern could compete for any future contracts as well as to operate such passenger and express service as was already set up.

A House committee yesterday was working on emergency legislation for temporary operation of the mail routes and arranged to approve the necessary legislation today.

Chairman Mead (Democrat), New York, of the committee predicted "within a week" a new permanent law under which the Government would pay according to the weight and distance the mail was carried.

Federal Inspection Denied in Oil Test Case

Tyler, Tex., Feb. 15 (AP).—Federal Judge Randolph Bryant today enjoined Federal agents from going on properties of 18 east Texas plaintiffs in the Panama oil case to see that their oil production is kept within the State allowable.

Based on his formal opinion Monday that the National Recovery Administration petroleum code could not be applied to companies engaged only in intrastate commerce which had not signed the code, the order Judge Randolph wrote today was on application of F. W. Fischer, attorney for the protesting companies.

Artists Boycott R.C.A. For Mural Destruction

The council voted to withdraw from the first municipal art exhibition sponsored by Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia in the forum of the R. C. A. Building, February 27.

Mrs. Julia Gould, at whose home Miss Dearlove lived, said the couple were engaged and planned to be married after Jochum completed his college work.

holds 51 per cent of the aviation stock, and that 19 men have directorships in two or more air aviation companies or subsidiaries. The commission reported that there were two questions under consideration: Whether the General Motor holdings and the interlocking directorates constituted violation of the Clayton act.

The House Postoffice Committee reported that hearings on the bill to authorize the temporary mail delivery by the Army would be completed next week, when work on permanent measure would start.

Committee investigators said that they were still delving into the books and affairs of Pan-American Airways, one of the only large operating companies whose mail contract was not canceled last week. The testimony of Pan-American officials will be taken as soon as the investigation is completed.

Return of Payments Offered.

The Shipping Board Bureau announced that several shipping lines enjoying mail contracts have agreed to return part of their mail pay to help clear up back debts owing the board for construction loans.

Brown's appearance before the Senate committee was finally assured after Senator Fess (Republican), Ohio, brought the question up on the floor of the Senate for the second time. He introduced a letter written him by Brown, offering to waive his right of immunity from criminal proscution based on his testimony, in which the former postoffice head suggested:

"Anything I may say may be used against me in any court in the land."

Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, chairman of the committee, told Fess that he would be glad to hear Brown at any time. Fess promptly called Brown up in New York, and 10 a. m. Monday was set as the time.

Black, who had not planned to call a meeting of his committee until Tuesday, said he was perfectly willing to advance the date "if it will only suit Mr. Brown's convenience."

The long promised and long awaited personal appearance of the former Postmaster General at this particular time in the committee investigation, it is believed, will necessitate summoning him again later. The committee has several more months of work on its investigation and in view of Brown's official position during the time that many air-mail contracts were awarded or extended, his testimony will be essential to round out the picture.

Brown explained that he wrote Fess because of the "insinuations and innuendoes with respect to my postal administration and personal affairs * * * are being used to justify in the public mind the whoesale annulment of air-mail contracts and destruction of the air-mail service."

After protesting that his "desire to prevent an irreparable injury to an industry transcends my personal consideration," Brown declared that he would not wait for the committee to summon him, but asked Fess to tell the committee of his "urgent request to be heard at the earliest date convenient."

The exhaustive statement issued by the former Cabinet member in New York related in detail the events at the two 1930 conferences of which MacCracken served as chairman.

Wanted to Sublet.

Brown said that passenger carriers asked for the meetings of operators and Postoffice officials in the hope that contractors could obtain additional mail schedules which they could sublet to operators who had no contracts, but who ran passenger service on parallel routes.

Brown emphasized the dissatisfaction of the Postoffice Department with the operators' report because they had "taken all the meat and left the bones."

"This report of the operators was placed on file and no further consideration was given to it for the reason that I had reached the definite conclusion that the plan previously suggested of affording aid to the passenger carriers, who had no mail contracts was impracticable and unsound, and if passenger operations were to be developed by the Postoffice Department in order to lighten the burden of air-mail services and ultimately create an economically independent transportation industry, the air-mail contractors themselves must be forced to develop a passenger and express business."

Commissioner Garland S. Ferguson, of the Federal Trade Commission, although he made no recommendations, submitted the commission's investigation for the information of Senator Black and his fellow committee members, and asked that the committee provide the commission with any additional information it obtained.

Its exhaustive inquiry into the stock and subsidiary set-up of General Motors indicates that similar studies will be made of United Aircraft & Transport Corporation and the Aviation Corporation, both large aviation holding companies.

The whole consideration of possible violation of the antitrust laws in the development of what Black calls the "aviation trust" has been lying dormant while Senate contempt proceedings and contract cancellations were being carried out.

Meanwhile, the Department of Justice probe, by its special Assistant Attorney General appointed to investigate the air mail situation to see what, if any, criminal action is justified, is being carried on.

Political Flurry Rises.

The discussion of Brown's proposed appearance before the committee caused a political flurry of considerable proportions when it was brought up by Senator Fess.

The two Senators Robinson, one a Republican from Indiana and the other the Democratic leader, of Arkansas, indulged in bitter comments. The Republican demanded that the Black committee investigate the charges that a company controlled by a heavy Democratic campaign fund contributor had not suffered by cancellation of its contract. He continued that there was as much corruption among the Democrats as among the Republicans, to which Robinson of Arkansas replied:

"That couldn't be possible."

Silverman Bares 2-Way Pact For Army Surpluses Resale

at prices and terms which were agreed upon."

The Silverman statement was in the form of a letter to Secretary Dern.

The grand jury investigation is expected to extend into next week, probably ending Monday, with Harry H. Woodring, Assistant Secretary of War, as the last witness. At least three persons are expected to be indicted.

District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett said yesterday the delay in continuing investigation was occasioned by the request of the Department of Justice for time to produce more witnesses. Identity of new witnesses, who are expected to appear today was not revealed. Garnett said the Justice Department still is seeking Frank Speicher, representative of an automobile tire concern, who is wanted as a witness.

Firm Later Barred.

Silverman pointed out in his letter to Dern that on February 5, nearly two months subsequent to the signing of the two-way contract, he and his firm had been barred from doing business with the War Department. He said the contract under which he was to sell underwear at a low price in exchange for the privilege of buying surplus material "at prices agreed upon" was not executed. He said this contract would save the Department $700,000.

Silverman also made public a letter he addressed to Secretary Dern on May 26, 1933, in which he discussed in detail the proposed sale of raincoats, which he had previously bought from the War Department, back to the Department. In the letter he charges Maj. Gen. John L. DeWitt, then quartermaster general, with unfairness.

"We have observed in the press," Silverman continued, "that certain general officers of your department have seen fit to cause the impression to be widely circulated that this proposed contract was unfair to the Government. This is not true. It was agreed thereby that the War Department should sell to us at fair and reasonable prices goods of the type that could not or would not be issued to troops or other Government departments, or in other words, goods that were useless to the Government.

Prices Termed Fair.

"Sales of articles identical to these had been made to other parties by the War Department at prices consistent with the prices embodied in our contract. And sales of similar articles now being offered at both wholesale and retail show that the prices which we were to pay the Government under this contract were fair and reasonable."

Silverman declared that opposition of Army officers to his proposal was not for the purpose of saving money "but because of a long-standing personal animosity toward me and my associates." He said he felt he and his associates had been improperly treated "to our very serious injury."

In conclusion, Silverman asked that no awards be made on the underwear bids until he was given a personal hearing.

In the letter Silverman said Gen. DeWitt "is so obsessed with a hatred for me that it has warped his judgment and it is impossible for him to deal fairly with me in any situation."

The letter also revealed the plan to sell back to the War Department "at a pair profit" material that he had previously purchased from the department.

Army's Reply.

He said he received the following reply from the Brooklyn Army Depot to his proposal:

"The quartermaster general has informed this office that a representative of your concern offered to sell a quantity of raincoats which were shipped on your contract dated October 13, 1932, to the Government at the Philadelphia Quartermaster Depot for equipment to the Civilian Conservation Corps.

"In this connection, information is furnished that the office of the quartermaster general will not approve the purchase of any of these raincoats at an advance in price over that paid by you. However, if you desire to dispose of them at the contract price plus any cost of handling and transportation that may have been incurred, a proposition to that effect submitted in writing by you will be considered by this office."

Silverman said the quartermaster general later justified his position by saying that doing business on the basis proposed by Silverman would lead to protest by manufacturers. He said on May 20 he personally saw the Secretary of War and that the Secretary telephoned the quartermaster general asking him to hold up awarding the contract. He said, however, the contracts had been awarded that morning at several times the price for which he offered to sell back to the Army the raincoats it had previously sold to him.

Protest to Secretary.

Silverman had offered to sell to the Army raincoats at $1.37½ apiece which he had previously bought from the Army for 25 cents.

He said he later took the matter up with Representative Celler, of New York, and that Celler had protested to the Secretary. He said Celler had a brief interview with Woodring but that Silverman had not been allowed to present his case.

Silverman said that later when he had made an offer to the War Department he received this reply from the quartermaster general:

"In reply, you are informed that the Secretary of War directs that no supplies that have been sold by the Government be repurchased by any agency of the War Department."

Silverman added: "The company has since been informed that the quartermaster general has shipped approximately 150,000 pairs of shoes to the Citizens Conservation Corps, which shoes had been purchased from the Army by the Georgia Wholesale Grocery Co."

Trustee Sued.

Charlotte, N. C., Feb. 15 (AP).—The Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co. today filed suit in Federal Court here against W. T. Shore, Charlotte attorney, and the American Trust Co. of Charlotte for $530,000 as a result of the alleged dissipation by Shore of the trust fund left by F. M. Bohannon, Winston-Salem tobacco millionaire, for his grandchildren.

Further Rail Truce Sought By Roosevelt both to those directly concerned and to the entire country.

In offering his proposal, Mr. Roosevelt recalled that both sides had entered into the existing agreement because they wished to do nothing which would embarrass or threaten the Administration recovery policy.

Deference to Administration.

"Neither side relinquished in any way its views as to what the wages should be," the President's letter continued, "but they agreed to a postponement of the controversy out of deference to what they believed to be the desire and policy of the Administration and in the general public interest."

The issue came up at this time because yesterday was the last day under the existing agreement when either side could give notice of a desired change in the arrangement.

In their 15 per cent proposal, railroad executives were represented here as maneuvering to provide a bargaining point in event of a wage controversy. They were represented generally as being privately satisfied with the existing 10 per cent deduction. It originally went into effect early in 1932 and at the instance of Joseph B. Eastman, Federal coordinator of transportation, was continued last summer for another year to June 30, 1934. Recently railroad labor chiefs indicated they might ask for a 5 or 10 per cent increase. This prospective demand was responsible for the action of the executives today it is understood.

Eastman at White House.

Indications that President Roosevelt would make some move were seen in Eastman's conference with President Roosevelt Wednesday and the White House visit of the previous day of A. F. Whitney, chairman of the labor chiefs. The Washington Post was informed that publication of the President's letter had been expected yesterday morning. Instead it was held back until last night, after the executives had given their formal notice of the wage reduction.

Railroad traffic increased 2.8 per cent last year over that of 1932. Net operating revenue went up in slightly less proportion. Passenger revenues were down, due to rate cut rivalry. Roads have received large loans from the Federal Government. In all, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has advanced the railroads about $400,000,000, of which some $60,000,000 has been repaid. Some 14 of the roads are under-collateraled in their loans. Six have gone into receivership or bankruptcy. Other roads, seeing improved busines ahead, are applying in increased numbers for loans to be put into maintenance or improved equipment. A few days ago the Public Works Administration allotted, on recommendation of the Interstate Commerce Commission, $12,000,000 to the Southern Pacific for maintenance improvement.

White House Rail Wage Plea

Executives and Union Officials Called On to Extend Wage Agreement for Another Six Months, in View of Continued National Emergency.

The full text of President Roosevelt's letter to the conference committee of managers (representing class 1 railroads) and the Railway Labor Executives Association on wage cuts follows:

"Gentlemen:

"On June 21, 1933, the railroad managers and the railroad labor executives entered into an agreement under which the arrangement by which 10 per cent is being deducted from the pay checks of railroad employees was extended from October 31, 1933, until June 30, 1934, and under which the date on which either party could submit a notice in accordance with the provisions of the railway labor act, indicating a desire to change the basic rates of pay, was extended from June 15, 1933, to February 15, 1934.

Basis of Former Truce.

"It was stated that this agreement had been reached because both the railroads and the employes wished to do nothing which would in any way embarrass or threaten the policy of the Administration; that they realized that the Government had embarked upon a wholly new policy designed to promote business and industrial activity and to further the general welfare; that they appreciated that until the results of this policy could be more clearly determined, it would be difficult to deal wisely with the wage controversy; and that the active prosecution of such a controversy at that time might have a most disturbing and unsettling effect.

"Neither side relinquished in any way its views as to what the wages should be, but they agreed to a postponement of the controversy out of deference to what they believed to be the desire and policy of the Administration and in the general public interest.

"The advent of February 15 makes it necessary again to give consideration to this wage matter. Marked progress toward National recovery has been made since last June, and I am sure that the goal will be reached. Nevertheless much remains to be accomplished, the emergency still exists, and the country has not yet attained conditions of stability."

Prices Little Changed.

There has been comparatively little change in the cost of living, but prices are unsettled and I am hopeful that they will in general rise to higher levels. The traffic of the railroads is improving, but their financial condition still is impaired and their credit has not yet been restored so far as private capital is concerned.

Under present conditions the prosecution of a bitter controversy between the railroads and their employes over wages would have a most disturbing influence, and I am further convinced that conditions are not yet sufficiently stable to permit of a wise determination of what the wages should be for the future.

"In the circumstances I venture to express the hope that the railroads and their employes may be able to agree upon an extension of the present agreement for at least six months. I am confident that such an extension would be of advantage to those directly concerned, and also to the entire country.

"Very sincerely yours,

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

Virginia Liquor Bill's Passage Awaited Today

Senators Ending Debates After Reserving Most Revenues to State.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Feb. 15.—A lion's share of prospective profits from operation of liquor dispensaries would go to the State under a whisky control bill amendment approved today by the Senate.

As the Senate approached completion of rum debates with passage of the bill expected tomorrow, the House cleared the way for anticipated passage of a bill to legalize prize fights by ordering the measure engrossed and placed on final reading tomorrow.

Leaders predicted the House would concur in the Senate amendment to give the State all liquor revenue up to $1,675,000 annually, with political subdivisions to receive two-thirds of the remainder, if any.

After bitter argument, the Senate rejected by 25 to 15 an amendment to make State manufacture of whisky compulsory. Instead, the control board was authorized to operate its own distilleries if deemed necessary.

Senator John Lesner, Norfolk, author of the mandatory manufacture amendment, contended that its passage would enable the board to sell liquor at reasonable prices. He added that privately controlled monopolies would extract millions of dollars from the State unless Virginia entered the manufacturing business.

Manufacture Fought.

An amendment by Senator T. Russell Cather, Winchester, to forbid the State from making liquor under any circumstances also was rejected, 32 to 5. The Winchester member reported that private interests could not hope to compete with the State in manufacturing apple brandy.

Without a record vote, the Senate turned down a finance committee amendment to require legislative confirmation of liquor board appointments made by the Governor.

Perhaps the most controversial issue to be considered tomorrow will be an amendment by Senator Aubrey C. Weaver, Front Royal, to fix the beer tax at $1 instead of $2.75 a barrel in an effort to make possible a 5-cent glass of brew.

Delegate Ralph Daughton, Norfolk, champion of the boxing proposal, predicted that measure would produce State revenue of more than $100,000 annually through an admissions tax of 5 per cent and license fees.

"We already have prize fights in many sections of the State," he commented. "Why not make them legal?"

Legislative action on the Cather bill to place all State lawyers under the attorney general was completed with House passage.

Passage Seen Today.

Richmond, Feb. 15 (AP).—State Senate leaders tonight confidently predicted the passage of the Virginia alcoholic beverages control bill in the Senate tomorrow. It already has passed in the House of Delegates.

Lieut. Gov. James H. Price, after observing the rapid progress today on committee amendments to the bill which would set up a State monopoly liquor dispensary system, said there was only one more controversial committee amendment "and the Senate should complete its work on the bill tomorrow."

During the debate on the mandatory manufacture amendment, offered by Senators Lesner, of Norfolk, and Wicker, of Richmond, Senator T. Russell Cather, of Winchester, told his Senate colleagues that in the manufacture of liquor the State would be sowing seeds for the greatest crop of political corruption in the history of Virginia. He denounced State manufacture as socialism in the Nth degree.

"In it," he said, "we should be abandoning the form of government under which we have lived since the establishment of the Republic. For myself, I wish to go on record forever as being opposed to this socialistic proposal."

Make Whisky in Pen? Youell Fears Drunk

Richmond, Feb. 15 (AP).—Maj. Rice M. Youell, superintendent of the State Penitentiary, today turned thumbs down on a proposal that the idle convicts in the penitentiary be employed in distilling whisky for sale through the State dispensaries to be set up by the General Assembly.

"It wouldn't work," Maj. Youell said. "The type of people we've got at the penitentiary would probably stay drunk all the time.

"Then, too, people probably would not want to drink whisky made in a penitentiary. A scheme of this sort was proposed in South Carolina recently, but it didn't get to first base."

Maj. Youell asked the Assembly recently for $150,000 with which to equip new shops at the penitentiary, since 450 men have been idle since January 19, when the Hawes-Cooper act became effective, preventing the sale of convict-made goods in interstate commerce.

Most of the 2,000 convicts now working on the highways may be out of jobs on July 1, owing to shortage of funds.

Redistricting Bill Signed By Gov. Peery

Long Fight Ends as Holt Bill Divides Va. in 9 Districts.

Richmond, Feb. 15 (AP).—Gov. Peery today signed the Holt congressional redistricting bill, disposing of one of the legislative season's most controversial problems, while the House engrossed a bill to legalize professional boxing and the Senate continued to work on the dispensary liquor control bill.

The redistricting bill, which becomes law as an emergency measure, divides the State into nine congressional districts, the smallest, or Fourth, having 242,000 population, and the largest, or Ninth, having 304,000 population.

The bill, which becomes law today, leaves the First, Second and Sixth Districts unchanged from the unconstitutional 1932 act, forcing an at-large race for Congress. Goochland goes from the Third to the Eighth; Cumberland, Appomattox and Buckingham from the Seventh to the Fourth; Charlottesville and the Counties of Albemarle, Madison and Greene from the Seventh to the Eighth, and Wythe from the Ninth to the Fifth.

Hampton Junket Accepted.

Both houses voted to accept an invitation of representatives from the lower peninsula to visit Newport News and Hampton, March 3, to see the $20,000,000 Marine museum, the air carrier Ranger and aerial maneuvers at Langley Field.

The House passed the Cather Senate bills, five in number, abolishing all special counsel for State departments and concentrating legal counsel in the office of the attorney general. The attorney general under the bills will be allowed two assistants at $5,000 each; four at $4,000 each, and two at $3,000 each, the cost to the State is unchanged.

House Session Lively.

While the Senate devoted all of its attention to the liquor bill, the House had a lively session. Delegate George W. Herring, of Prince William, started a debate by reading a long list of PWA grants to Virginia colleges. He said of the $4,000,000 authorized, 75 per cent was unnecessary work. He attacked Richmond newspapers and also asserted that House members were for the Governor's tax program for schools.

A discussion followed with several members joining in. Finally, with W. Stuart Moffett on the floor, A. E. S. Stephens asked the speaker to state what was before the House. The reply was nothing. Moffett, however, continued on a point of personal privilege, stating that a bill he supported at the special session was being misrepresented.

Moffett claimed Herring's remarks were misleading, that the PWA grants were Federal money with 30 per cent an outright gift.

With this argument out of the way the House went to work on a long calendar and acted upon a long list of bills.

Delegate Daughton, of Norfolk, explained his boxing bill, asserting that it legalized what was being done in the State. He said he understood Arlington County financed its welfare work from revenue from illegal boxing. The Norfolk delegate said the bill would bring in approximately $100,000 in revenue through a 5 per cent receipts tax and licenses, and that 50 per cent of this would go to the communities.

The bill will permit 15-round boxing bouts of three minutes each and the sport will be regulated by a three-man boxing commission to be named by the Governor to serve without compensation.

RumBoard Due For Higher Pay

Goolrick Predicts House Acceptance of $7,500 Maximum Salary.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Richmond, Feb. 15.—House concurrence in Senate amendments to the liquor control bill was predicted today by former Senator C. O'Connor Goolrick, Fredericksburg, a member of the commission studying the measure.

Observers credited Goolrick with winning many votes for a successful Senate amendment to authorize the Governor to fix the salaries of control board members at not more than $7,500 a year. The House previously ruled members should receive $5,000.

"I think it's vital to have men of high standing for the board," the fromer Senator declared. "We could not get the proper men for $5,000." Goolrick was enthusiastic over the Senate's refusal to make State manufacture of liquor mandatory.

"The State needs whisky revenue," he said. "If the State went into the manufacturing business it would be five years before any profits would go to the treasury, because all earnings would be needed to build and operate distilleries.

"State manufacture would open the road to graft and corruption. It also would prevent manufacturers from coming into the State and investing in plants."

Virginia Planning Board Is Sought

Resolution Laid Before State Assembly.

According to Col. Hodges, the work of the commission would be to formulate plans for an "adequate system of State and National public works in the Old Dominion; to draft a plan for a coordinated system of transportation for Virginia; to guide the use of natural resources; to determine the best use of rural lands, and to provide for simplification, economy and efficiency in local and State government."

Hoboes Riot In Almshouse At Frederick

Superintendent Appeals to County Board After Night of Uproar.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 15 (Spl.).—Asserting that the disorder of about 50 transients at Montevue Hospital, the Frederick County almshouse, is beyond his control, Supt. James A. Jones appealed to the county commissioners today to remedy the situation, threatening to resign.

Mr. Jones told the commissioners the transients have caused trouble ever since they have been housed at the institution. The climax, he said was reached last night and early this morning, when intoxicated men rushed about the building shouting. A bedfast blind inmate was injured in the uproar.

Several had a fight and walls of the room were spattered with blood. One inmate was chocked and many terrorized. Mr. Jones said he was powerless to deal with the large group of unruly men and his entire staff is demoralized.

The commissioners promised they would take measures to prevent a recurrence of the trouble, and that after February 27 other arrangements would be made for housing transients. Recently, more than 100 of them at the Brunswick Center became disorderly and 11 were lodged in the Frederick jail.

Chief of Police William F. Steiner said numerous complaints have been made to police regarding the conduct of hoboes, including attempts to break in homes.

New Aircraft Carrier Nears Completion as Guns Are Fitted

Heavy Battery Will Fire Big Shells 12 to 14 a Minute.

Newport News, Va., Feb. 15 (AP).—The U. S. S. Ranger is showing its teeth.

Five of the eight large guns of the first battery to go aboard the aircraft carrier have been placed and the three others are ready.

The ship, one of the most modern pieces of Uncle Sam's fighting equipment, is berthed at the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., where it was built.

Throwing 70-pound shells at the rate of 12 to 14 per minute to a distance of 6 miles, the guns will compose a formidable battery.

Lighter but faster guns will compose the secondary battery. These, patterned after the machine gun, will fire more than 600 shots a minute and are designed to repel aircraft attacks.

Despite "rough ends," the ship is fast nearing completion, Capt. Henry T. Wright said, and will be delivered to the Government about May 1.

County CWA Change Urged

Barbour Citizens Want New Administrator, Probers Told.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 15 (Spl.).—A telegram declaring that "Barbour citizens want a new CWA administrator" was received today by the Joint Legislative CWA Investigating Committee from I. Raymond Murphy, leading Democrat of that county and former college professor.

Murphy disputed a statement previously wired by Dr. Karl Myers, chairman of the county welfare board, that there was no political favoritism in the Barbour CWA and that there are 58 Democratic foremen on the CWA pay roll.

William N. Beehler, State CWA administrator at Wheeling, where he made a public address tonight, stated today the State investigation of the CWA had only confirmed his confidence in the existing county boards. He reiterated that charges of political favoritism made by United States Senator M. M. Neely are unfounded.

A request for conversion of Federal CWA projects in West Virginia into State projects was sent by the State CWA to the National administration today. Approximately 6,000 now are employed on these Federal CWA projects in the State.

Bethesda Men Want Rockville Trolleys Ended

Chamber Prefers Buses When Wider Highway Is Finished.

Street railway service between the District line at Wisconsin avenue and Rockville would be abandoned in favor of bus service under the terms of a resolution adopted by the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce.

Substitution of the bus service would be made coincident with the widening of Wisconsin avenue, which is expected to go forward as soon as weather will permit.

Several visitors expressed views on the suburban transit system as affecting the general Bethesda area, including James Martin, secretary of the District Public Utilities Commission, and M. O. Eldridge, assistant director of traffic in Washington.

Mr. Eldridge predicted an early end for the suburban railway system in favor of bus service as a general policy throughout the country.

Brainard W. Parker, a director of the Montgomery Bus Lines, Inc., strongly supported the proposal, declaring it would mean much better transportation service for the western suburban section of Montgomery County.

Parker answered criticisms of present bus service by condemning competition offered by National bus lines that enter Washington by way of the Rockville pike and Wisconsin avenue.

A committee composed of Emory H. Bogley, chairman; Thomas O. Nichols and Samuel E. Stonebraker was appointed by President J. Harry Welch to cooperate with the Montgomery County Commissioners and with the State Roads Commission in securing the inauguration of expanded bus service before the improvements to Wisconsin avenue are completed.

The chamber also voted to conduct a zoning survey of the Bethesda business area to determine advisability of apartment house zoning after the Wisconsin avenue improvements are completed.

West Virginia Mother Gives Life in Snow, Trudging 9 Miles in Fruitless Attempt to Get Medicine for Her Child.

Shortly after she started back, a swirling snowstorm burst upon her and the temperature began falling below the zero mark.

She plodded on, stopping for rest at the dwelling of Mr. and Mrs. John Rhodes, mountain "neighbors," 3 miles from her own home. They urged her to remain, but she said she had to get the medicine home for her sick child.

She went into the storm, with night coming on, but she never reached home.

Yesterday, a searching party, headed by her husband, following a trail blazed by shreds of clothing on the brambles, found Mrs. Leary frozen to death, a half mile from home.

The trail showed she had walked in circles in the blinding snow, had dropped from a ledge into a shallow gully and stumbled, almost barefooted and with clothing tattered, into the branches of a fallen tree.

Our Credit Policies

How they affect you

When a bank makes a sound loan, it is benefiting the community. When it makes an unsound loan, it endangers the community. Our credit policies are, therefore, of acute interest to you.

There's another reason: You'll generally find that a bank which makes loans on a high standard vigorously adheres to the same standard in all of its relations with customers.

When you want certainty that your checking account will be efficiently handled, your estate and your heirs protected, safety for your savings or any satisfactory financial service—find a bank that has high credit standards and maintains them with courage and impartiality.

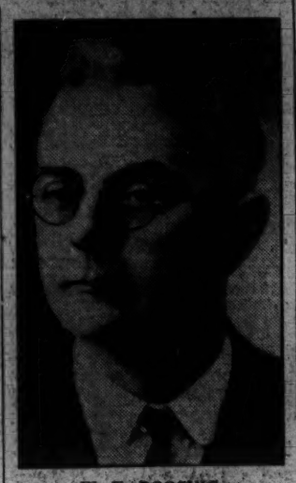
Doosing, Long-Sought Banker, Recovers Here From Amnesia

Does Not Know Where He Spent 31 Days Since He Vanished.



W. T. DOOSING.

Mr. Doosing, missing from his Shawville home since January 15, arrived here late yesterday on a bus from Pittsburgh. He could give no account of where he had been in the 31 days since he last telephoned his family in Shawsville from Roanoke, where he had gone on business. He told his sister that he believed he had traveled much by bus, spending a number of days in hotels, whose names or location he could not remember.

Dr. R. K. Foxwell, attending Mr. Doosing, says his loss of memory was induced by extreme nervousness, but reports his condition is improved.

With Mr. Doosing today are his brothers, Dr. J. I. Gardner, of Blacksburg, and Frank Gardner, of Shawsville, who arrived early this morning.

Previous to Mr. Doosing's arrival last night, preparations had been made to drag Roanoke River in the vicinity of Roanoke, and a wide search had been conducted for him by Washington and Virginia newspapers.

Similar observance is planned at the law office of James Monroe, fifth President.

Best CCC Camp Contest Nears Final Report

Virginia Places 4 in 11 Surviving Units of Third Area.

Baltimore, Feb. 15 (AP).—Final inspections to determine the most outstanding camp of the Civilian Conservation Corps in the Third Corps Area for the second six-month enrollment period were in progress in Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania today.

A board of three staff officers selected by Maj. Gen. Paul B. Malone, corps area commander, is making the survey.

Choice has narrowed to 11 camps selected by district supervisors as most outstanding in their respective districts. Four of the camps are in Virginia, six in Pennsylvania and one in Maryland.

Medals for Winners.

The commanding officer of the winning unit will receive a gold medal. Other officers will receive silver buttons, and all enlisted men and enrolled members will receive bronze buttons offered by the Army and Navy Journal.

The elimination process consisted in the selection of subdistrict supervisors of the best camp in their respective areas for inspection by district supervisors to arrive at the number allotted to the respective districts for the final consideration by the corps area board.

All Factors Considered.

Factors considered in making the selections were camp site, living quarters, kitchen and mess halls, supply, administration, discipline, morale and welfare, appearance of CCC personnel, and educational program on the basis of the number enrolled, courses offered and advancement made.

Members of the board are Lieut. Col. Ned B. Rehkoof, assistant chief of staff; Lieut. Col. Charles S. Hamilton, assistant corps area quartermaster, and Maj. Elias E. Cooley, Medical Corps, on duty with the Johns Hopkins University Reserve Officers Training Corps, but temporarily detailed as the medical member of the board.

W. Va. Fruit Society Elects John M'Donald

Marketing Problems Are Discussed as 2-Day Session Closes.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 15 (Spl.).—John Y. McDonald, of Charles Town, was elected president of the West Virginia Horticultural Society at the business session of the forty-first annual two-day meeting which closed today.

Henry W. Miller, of Paw Paw, was named vice president. Carroll R. Miller and Malcolm M. Brown, both of this city, were reelected secretary and treasurer, respectively.

The 1935 session will be held here.

Growers from this State, Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania discussed problems today. Porter Taylor, of the general crops section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, Washington, told the growers he regarded as impracticable any crop agreement on domestic production from this section because of the scattered producing fields but believed an agreement on exports was feasible.

The growers also heard talks by F. J. Scheiderham, superintendent of Kearneyville Experiment Farm, John Lewis, Charles Town; Charles M. Solenberger, this city; W. S. Campfield, Staunton, Va., and E. Lee Goldsborough, Shepherdstown, W. Va.

A declaration in favor of having the United States accept settlement of foreign debts owed it on the best terms possible under present conditions was made by former Gov. John J. Cornwall here last night before the society.

He advocated delegation of authority to the President or a commission to adjust tariff programs with nations disposed to take American products so that no time might be lost in taking advantage of such openings.

Annapolis Offered Site for Airport

U. S. Expected to Advance $125,000 for Project.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 15 (Spl.). The movement to secure an airport for Annapolis, initiated by the chamber of commerce, has been given whole-hearted support by the city council, Rotary, Kiwanis and Civitan Clubs and other organizations.

Mayor Walter E. Quenstedt made known today that the city may receive a free site for the port. He said an offer had been made by Albert H. McCarthy, retired naval officer, who owns a large tract of land at Eastport. The property now is being surveyed by air officials of the Maryland National Guard to determine its suitability.

It is proposed to ask the Government to advance funds for construction work. Chamber of commerce officials say they have been advised that $125,000 will be available providing the project measures up to requirements.

Blossom Fete Still in Doubt

Few Voice Interest in Big Valley Event, and Funds Must Be Secured.

Winchester, Feb. 15 (Spl.).—An apparent lack of interest by Frederick County citizens in the fate of the annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival has caused the festival's executive committee to delay making plans for the 1934 event.

To obtain Winchester's sentiment, a special coupon was published in a local paper recently on which citizens were requested to write their views regarding the festival. Up to last night, only a score of replies had been received. All replies favored holding the 1934 fete, but the magnitude of the financial responsibility entailed requires that more persons show the desire the committee declares.

William E. Cooper, committee chairman, and Clifford D. Grim, fete treasurer, in asking that citizens send to them any suggestions regarding the festival, point out that although the expenses incident to the festival have been reduced thousands of dollars during recent years, it is still necessary that substantial financial support be guaranteed the event, if it is to be held this year.

Store License Limit Deferred In Virginia City

Fredericksburg Council Grants 30-Day Wait; Manager Reports.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 15 (Spl.). Extension of the time limit on city licenses for 30 days, from February 1 to March 1, was approved last night by the City Council, after S. Taylor Scott, commissioner of revenue, listed delinquent merchants.

Mayor Robert J. Payne presented the annual report of the city manager, Levin J. Houston, jr., which will be published as soon as the mayor's report is released. Mayor Payne also submitted a list of proposed CWA projects recommended for the second phase of the CWA program. Action was deferred by the council, pending completion of negotiations with Spotsylvania County regarding extension of sewer and water lines into Elwood City and Mayfield.

An ordinance requiring that bus terminals be maintained on private property and prohibiting the taking on or discharge of passengers in the streets, was proposed by Councilman Cecil Latta Reid.

The council adopted a resolution asking the State highway department to provide a walkway on the free bridge across the Rappahannock.

Forty dollars were appropriated to cover expenses of local musicians and speakers who have been invited to give weekly radio programs in behalf of Fredericksburg over Station WRVA in Richmond.

Cargoes that put Americans out of work

THERE is often a suspicion that when a great industry speaks in its own behalf, it has a hidden purpose. . . . The facts in the situation confronting the United States sugar refining industry today, however, speak for themselves.

When workers in the great refineries of the principal seaports of the country see cargoes of refined sugar being unloaded at their very doorstep, they know that every bag means just so much less work for them and their fellow-workers, just so much less business for the community in which they live and for other communities of fellow Americans! Tropical refineries hum, United States refineries work part time.

No one can seriously question the efficiency with which the American refiners have served the American public in supplying it with the finest sugar, in all required varieties, at a low and reasonable price. In the years 1922 to 1931, 19 American refineries paid out $231,605,137 in wages and salaries. They pay out for materials and supplies, including coal, oil and power, approximately one billion dollars in a normal ten-year period, furnishing business for many industries and employment for many thousands of our people.

These cargoes of refined sugar are being dumped here from the Philippines, Puerto Rico, and Cuba because we have a tariff schedule which gives, in effect, not only free trade to all island refiners but a virtual subsidy to Cuba. This has already resulted in a loss to Americans of a market within their own country equivalent to the annual consumption of sugar in the following 21 states: Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, Delaware, West Virginia, South Carolina, Mississippi, Florida, Arkansas, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Idaho, Nevada, Wyoming, North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, Colorado, and Oregon.

The sugar refining industry has been singled out for this kind of foreign invasion. Other importers of raw materials are carefully safeguarded. Raw cocoa beans, for instance, are admitted free of duty; but finished chocolate must pay a 40% duty! Raw silk is free of duty; but finished silk must pay a duty of 65%!

No country can surpass the United States in the modernness, efficiency and sanitary cleanliness of its sugar refineries.

Experience demonstrates that the cane sugar industry attains its highest development by producing raw cane sugar in the tropics and refining it in the country of consumption. This method utilizes the most efficient factors in both fields and renders the best permanent service to the public.

American refineries operate under the NRA. American refineries also pay larger taxes and recently a processing tax on supplies. Cuba has tropical labor, pays no processing tax, and enjoys a subsidy in addition! This is what closes domestic refineries and takes business from the coal fields and supply firms everywhere.

The cane sugar refining industry, like many other American industries, has grown through 200 years with the needs of expanding America. Its purpose has been to receive the raw materials from sugar-producing areas of the world and refine them into an essential food for the entire country. So efficiently has this service been rendered that neither drought nor flood, hurricane nor war have hitherto impaired the service it has performed.

It is certainly in the public interest to keep this great industry within our borders.

Melvin A. Traylor.

In life Melvin A. Traylor was the president of one of the largest banks in the world. But at his death we inclined to trace his career back to its humble beginnings in the limestone hills of Kentucky. When his biography is written the most interesting chapters may deal with his Lincolnesque struggle for an education, his early experiences as a mountaineer and his evolution from a school teacher in Leatherwood Creek into a National figure, rather than with his record as a bank president.

Mr. Traylor's career was made up of a series of struggles with his environment. Rugged determination and persistent work took him from a backwoods farm to a small grocery store, thence to the law and a position as assistant county attorney and finally to banking. He began his career in this field as manager, cashier and janitor of a small branch bank which served the 150 inhabitants of Malone, Tex.

When friends of Mr. Traylor put his name forward as a candidate for the Presidential nomination on the Democratic ticket in 1932 no doubt they were relying more upon the appeal of his conquest against adversity than upon his prestige as the head of a large Chicago bank. His story is typically American. Even at the approach of death he fought a courageous fight, surrendering only after suffering seven relapses in a 35-day struggle with pneumonia.

Bank Guaranty Postponed.

The President has assented to the proposal to defer for a year the introduction of the permanent system of deposit guaranty which was to have become effective next July. Those who have been urging such a postponement will be much gratified and relieved at the news, because it shows that the President appreciates the need for further study of banking reform plans. It is hoped that before July 1, 1935, Congress, with the approval of the Administration, will be prepared to recommend constructive banking changes which will make it possible to reject all forms of deposit guaranty for the future.

The general objections to deposit guaranty in principle and the specific objections to the especially obnoxious and dangerous form of guaranty represented by the permanent system have been set forth frequently and persuasively. The Administration has tacitly conceded the force of these objections by agreeing to the suggestion for a postponement.

Another Trade War.

A Franco-British trade war has been inaugurated by the imposition of 20 per cent penalty duties on French imports into Great Britain. France has simultaneously denounced the existing commercial treaties between the two countries, the abrogation to become effective three months hence.

The dispute is an outgrowth of the sweeping cuts in import quotas announced by France at the end of last year. These reductions in some cases amount to as much as 75 per cent and were imposed with the intention of forcing concessions from other countries. The United States, for instance, has succeeded in obtaining restoration of full quota allocations, helped thereto by the new bargaining weapon offered by our own liquor-import quota system.

The British, however, allege that they have been discriminated against and instead of undertaking to negotiate with France, are resorting to reprisals. In the present disturbed political state of Europe, the possibility of economic warfare between France and Great Britain creates consternation. Indeed, it is reported to have led to dissension between the British Foreign Office and the Board of Trade, which is the instigator of the move to penalize France.

The incident affords an arresting illustration of the recklessness inspired by modern mercantilism, which like that of earlier centuries seeks always to buy less and sell more. In the case of France, the present proceedings seem unusually rash. The country is harassed by domestic disturbances while dangerous political disaffection exists over the greater part of the European continent. Added to that are monetary and exchange disturbances which are also sources of danger.

Under these circumstances the French certainly can not afford to forfeit British friendship. For that matter, the British can not afford to alienate the French. Yet these two countries are preparing to engage in a commercial contest that can yield neither party anything but bitterness.

It has been said that the French are obsessed by the desire to eliminate the unfavorable trade balance resulting from their dealings with Great Britain. That, of course, can be done by any country adopting a policy of exclusion, which leads in the end to destruction of international trade. The policies now being pursued tend in that direction. They promise to give rise to animosities making solution of grievous political problems increasingly difficult.

The MacCracken Case.

So far as the Senate is concerned the MacCracken case has been settled, with a vote in the ratio of more than 2 to 1 favoring a ten-day jail sentence for the contempt attributed to the former Assistant Secretary of Commerce. The vote to impose an identical sentence on L. H. Brittin, vice president of the Northwest Airways, was even more decisive.

The Senate has thus asserted the right to mete out punishment in cases where a substantial majority of the legislative chamber believes that its prerogatives have been flouted. On the Constitutional authority of the Senate to assume this function there is, even within that body, divided opinion. In the cases of both MacCracken and Brittin, separate votes were taken on the issue of guilt and on the issue of sentence. In both cases the affirmative vote was smaller, the negative larger, on the issue of imposing punishment.

Counsel for MacCracken has pointed out that there is pending in the District courts a case challenging the Constitutional right of the Senate to take the action which it asserted Wednesday. Very properly the legislative body has agreed to a stay of execution to permit expedition of that case. Obviously the issue here at stake goes far deeper than the question of the guilt or innocence of the present defendants on the charges preferred against them. The Senate is assuming for itself powers which trench upon those of the judicial arm of government. Its right to assume those powers must be carefully tested. No precedent of such far-reaching significance should be established lightly. And as yet it is by no means clear to the average citizen that the Constitution ever intended the Senate to exercise such authority as that assumed in the jail sentences passed on MacCracken and Brittin.

The very serious stage which these cases have now reached contrasts strongly with the light-hearted way in which the issue of Senatorial authority in the matter at first appeared to be regarded by some of the principals. The Senate has now made it very clear that it does not regard its prosecutions of allegedly fraudulent transactions as a fit subject for jocularity or legal finesse. Public opinion indorses the view that the whole issue is one of the utmost seriousness. Tactics which have seemed unnecessary impediments to the Senate's efforts to do its duty in behalf of clean government are not condoned.

If the Senate has now overstepped its proper prerogative it is perhaps in part due to irritation over the obstructions with which its effort to exercise unquestioned rights were confronted. Such irritation, however, is no justification for the assumption of powers which may well be improper, as well as undesirable, for that body to exercise. Prompt determination of whether or not the Senate overstepped its due prerogative Wednesday is now in order. The humorous aspects of the case, if ever present, are now distinctly relegated to the past.

Compulsion For Cotton.

Considerable opposition to the Bankhead bill for compulsory restriction of cotton marketing has developed within the ranks of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. Reports from Capitol Hill about a week ago indicated that Secretary Wallace had given "unqualified support" to this drastic measure. But when the Secretary appeared before the House Committee on Agriculture he pointed out numerous defects in the compulsory curtailment scheme and emphasized his "reluctance to join in the advocacy of the bill unless there was a clear and unmistakable demand from the producers themselves."

Under the Bankhead measure farmers would be able to sell only 9,000,000 bales of cotton from the 1934-35 crop. A prohibitive tax would be levied upon the ginning of cotton above that amount, and certificates of exemption from this tax, covering 9,000,000 bales, would be divided among the growers on the basis of their previous production. In subsequent years the Secretary of Agriculture would have authority to fix the amount of cotton that might be ginned free of tax.

The general effect of this measure would be to make the Secretary of Agriculture a czar over the cotton growing and ginning industries. Evidently Secretary Wallace shrinks from this responsibility. Yet he takes note of the fact that 95 per cent of the farmers answering a questionnaire sent out by his department favor compulsory control of cotton production.

In view of the fundamental objections to this experiment Secretary Wallace's hesitancy in approving it can be easily understood. The right of every cotton grower to sell his product would be drastically limited. Instead of signing voluntary acreage-reduction contracts, as they are now doing, farmers would be told how much cotton they might dispose of. In a bounteous year there would be more cotton on hand than could be sold. In a lean year farmers probably would blame the Government for their inability to harvest enough cotton to meet market demands. Cotton and politics would doubtless become inextricably mixed.

Thousands of farmers might object to the quotas assigned to them and carry their cases to the courts. Secretary Wallace asked the House committee to "envision the complications that would ensue" from such "a multiplicity of suits and claims" against the Government. "I do not know," he said, "how such eventualities could be prevented."

Secretary Wallace also fears that if a high tax is imposed on surplus cotton "there may be a tendency to shift the emphasis on cotton production to an emphasis on the procuring of exemption certificates." On this point he told the committee:

> These certificates might themselves become a commodity. This could mean that various persons who in the past have engaged in the production of cotton and would be entitled to certificates, may prefer to remain out of cotton production and to rely for that part of their income normally received from cotton upon the sales value of exemption certificates. This might have a serious effect upon the stability of cotton production and supply.

Secretary Wallace also notes that the Bankhead bill would place "an effective embargo" on non-domestic cotton. Since we normally import considerable long-staple cotton and the Administration is now trying to encourage foreign trade, this provision must be particularly jarring to Mr. Wallace's sense of equilibrium.

The Secretary's dislike for regimentation and his skepticism as to various features of the compulsory control plan invite a question as to why he does not use his influence to save the farmer from this menace of bureaucracy.

"Too Smart By Half."

(A CORRECTION.)

An editorial entitled "Too Smart By Half," published in The Post on February 13 in connection with the MacCracken contempt proceedings, stated the following:

> "A Senate committee ordered William P. MacCracken, jr., to produce certain records at a hearing. He did not contest the validity of that subpena, but while under it permitted, and aided, two men to extract some of the records from his office. Some of them were destroyed. Cited for contempt, he was released on personal bond of his attorney, Frank Hogan. That personal bond implied that Mr. Hogan would deliver his client, in good faith, when the Senate required his presence. The sergeant at arms of the Senate went to Mr. MacCracken's office to arrest him, when his presence was required, and then to Mr. Hogan's office, asking for performance of the promise. He was met, instead, by propositions for delivery which he properly refused."

Mr. Hogan has called to our attention the fact that the statement is incorrect, and, therefore, we are glad to make the following correction:

It appears that Mr. Hogan complied with his bond, and produced Mr. MacCracken in the Senate on February 5. On that date the Senate released Mr. MacCracken from custody. Thereafter a new warrant was issued in connection with which Mr. Hogan made no promises and gave no bond. It was under the new warrant that the sergeant-at-arms in the Senate went to Mr. MacCracken's office to arrest him, then to Mr. Hogan's office, where he was met by a proposition for delivery which he refused.

The Post regrets the error which crept into its recital of the facts and extends its apology to Mr. Hogan therefor.

Nemesis Of Corruption.

William Travers Jerome, who died Tuesday in New York, came to be known as the "nemesis of Thaw" because of his relentless prosecution of the slayer of Stanford White. But the spectacular nature of that case and the appellation obscured the real worth and underlying principle of his public career. He cared little about Thaw or the Thaw case, in itself; it was his temperament which would not allow him to be less than vigorous and relentless in his pursuit of what he conceived to be justice.

Without the dignity and asceticism of Samuel Seabury, he was in fact the Seabury of his day. He had the crusading heart, the reforming instinct, and the absolute faith in the efficacy of democratic government provided it was decent. He dedicated his whole public career to trying to make the government of New York City reputable. It is striking that the careers of the two men, Jerome and Seabury, should have had such close parallels.

Both men knew the fruits of victory; both overthrew Tammany domination. Jerome drove Richard Croker from the leadership of Tammany Hall and Croker confessed, "I am working all the time for my pockets." He made it possible for Walter Strong and Seth Low to become reform mayors. Jerome spurned the nomination for mayor himself, saying that he was a lawyer and not a politician. Seabury's revelations paved the way for LaGuardia's election and Curry's crown is wobbly. Both men were counsel for legislative committees that uncovered rottenness in the administration of justice.

Mr. Jerome was the more spectacular of the two. As judge of the court of special sessions, created in a reform wave, he led raids in which his men chopped down doors, blew up barricades with dynamite and literally dragged denizens of gambling and disorderly houses from their haunts. As district attorney he continued the raids, holding that in such a position he was obligated to be "aggressively honest and not wait for crime to come to me."

Although a reformer, Mr. Jerome was no prude. His enemies derisively called him "Cigarette Willie" because he was an inveterate smoker. He took a drink whenever he felt like it; he played poker when he wanted to and it was said that his language, when expressing his moral indignation, was worthy of a sailor. But when vice was organized and commercialized and used to corrupt public officials and justice, he was outraged and attacked it with all the vigor of his being.

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

THE FEDERAL Commission on Industrial Relations began a series of hearings to endeavor to determine the extent of unemployment in the country. More than 350,000 were reported idle in New York. The purpose of the hearings, Frank P. Walsh, chairman, said, was to determine the necessity for a Federal employment service.

WILLIAM G. McADOO did the tango and Senator Hoke Smith the "hesitation" at dances between hearings on location of Federal Reserve Banks in Atlanta.

SPRING FASHIONS decreed the return of the empire style.

On the Starling Problem.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read your columns regarding riddance of the starling or the attemps to eliminate the bird from the city and the various methods used.

After giving the matter some thought I wish to submit the following for those who are attempting to rid the city of this so-called pest:

The use of 12-gauge shotguns, black powder. Remove the shot from shell and replace with mustard seed with sufficient wads in order to pack the seed tightly. This will cause the seed to scatter widely, and at distances farther than 40 to 50 feet will not injure the bird, but give him to understand there is something besides noise attached to the gun.

There is very little force to the seed after traveling 50 feet and will cause no damage other than growing if they fall on the soil in the spring. Then, instead of picking dandelions, will gather nice, fresh mustard greens.

This will soon get rid of the birds at little cost and with no injury to their melodious voices.

MATHEW CULBERT, Jr.
Washington, Feb. 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I would suggest they put radios around the Capitol, let the starlings listen to some of the crooners and they will leave.

J. D. M. LANLEY.
Washington, Feb. 8.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As the French say, "It is to laugh." From the existing conditions on the starling front and the antics of our City Fathers, architect of the Capitol and our police (pictures of the latter appearing in the press firing blanks at the birds), the country at large must be having a good laugh at us.

Since the starlings are a filthy, noisy and destructive element, and as the professors agree they are more harmful than helpful, why, for goodness sake, not get rid of them instead of shooing them from place to place? The modern way of exterminating criminals is by electricity. If a lot of naked wires were strung about where these birds roost and if a good current were turned on it would be a quick, painless method of ending the nuisance. The use of poison gas is not only very dangerous but in the open air might be effective on human beings as well as the starlings. The plan to use gas, I believe, has been abandoned as impractical.

Of course "bird lovers" and cranky folks will be appalled at the idea of exterminating these pests, but let's get rid of the birds and let the fussy, busybody folks be appalled, or, better still, send them to the front door of some Government or other building (sans umbrella or hat) when the starlings have foregathered and, believe me, these so-called "bird lovers" will be as ready as the next one to have the "juice" turned on and quickly at that.

And, speaking of our police being called on to fire away a lot of blank shells, just to stir up the birds and send them to some other roost, there is little room for doubt when I say these policemen are sadly needed to patrol the city and protect the citizens (for which the police force is organized and paid), the wave of crime now sweeping the city (and country) requiring the presence of every policeman on the street. In fact, we have an entirely too small a force of police as it is. Their number should be added to very materially and this is a place where "CWA" or other money could be used to a great deal better advantage than to which some of it is being spent.

From conversations with several police precinct captains it appears they have entirely too few men to adequately patrol and protect the large territory assigned to them and to properly do this work the force must be greatly enlarged. It seems that the size of the force is not being added to as rapidly as crime and lawlessness is increasing. It is earnestly wished that the City Fathers and the gentlemen on Capitol Hill would realize existing conditions and get an appropriation through for a police force adequate to our present needs. The newspapers are running over with the exploits of the criminals, hold-up men, and housebreakers. There are many people, both male and female, who will "take a chance" and drive recklessly and commit other offenses that they would not if a "row of brass buttons" is around or in the offing. There has been entirely too much carping criticism of our police.

A TAXPAYER.
Washington, Feb. 9.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I applaud the letter of E. A. Gaston in The Post of February 9, with its sensible and humane suggestion that we should stop straining at starlings, as it were, and utilize them to abolish a worse nuisance which we swallow without protest, that of unlimited "street-sitting" automobiles.

Perhaps if the civic spirited efforts of these valiant little birds were sufficiently encouraged instead of discouraged we might in time, with their help, even solve the "traffic problem" by opening up the streets to traffic—revolutionary as this idea may seem—instead of using them as at present for free storage garages. The Grant School.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I noted with surprise the editorial in your issue of February 4 entitled "Against Clamor." I am not surprised at the evident attempt to justify the school authorities in refusing to recommend a new school in the place of the present Grant School. That has been a decision long since arrived at by them, I think. I am surprised, however, to find an editorial so unfair in your good paper. I would suggest that the writer of the editorial look up the meaning of the word "clamor." Shouting, bawling, irregular sounds proceeding from many, &c. Where has the writer heard all of this? Not at the meeting of the Board of Education, where a proper request was made for a new school building, not at the meeting of the District Commissioners, where it was suggested to apply, and not before the senatorial committees, who have the final say in such matters. A dignified request, with proper reasons, was made in each instance. If the writer has heard of the indignation expressed by some parents at the condition of the Grant School, he has only to look and be convinced that a clamor would have been justified He would have found an old rattle-trap of a building 52 years old, with an out-of-date heating plant, and until very recently, inadequate and most disgusting and unhealthy sanitary arrangements. So unsanitary that I am told the health officers of the District condemned the whole thing, and new toilets and plumbing have been installed. It is not hard to guess, since these repairs have been made, what the report of the survey will be. We of the West End will be glad to second Mr. Ballou in any effort to save money for the District, but we stand for a fair deal, not the new deal of building magnificent monuments to himself and his associates. We have paid taxes on houses and lots for years while the land on which some of the new schools are built was selling by the acre. We don't ask for a swmming pool one one side, and a stadium on the other, and a kitchen where dainty lunches can be prepared.

We want a serviceable school building that will correct the overcrowded conditions of the present one, and that will accommodate the children of this section and do away with the necessity of sending them eight or ten blocks through the traffic to other schools. I heard Senator King say, "I got the rudiments of my education sitting on a hard bench in a country schoolhouse." There are others, Mr. Senator, but I can't help thinking that if the present-day conditions demand more comfort for the children, and these comforts are supplied others, why should we in the West End go without?

As Others See It

Entirely Too Drastic.

Canceling all the air mail contracts because dirt and corruption have been found in some places is, as Will Rogers says, like stopping all the trains because a crooked railroad president has been found. Evidence already uncovered is convincing that there has been corruption, particularly in respect to air mail subsidies. That is a familiar accompaniment of subsidies, no matter to whom they may be extended. It seems to be inherent in the subsidy system. It calls for a thorough house-cleaning. But a moral indictment against the whole industry, such as the wholesale canceling of contracts brings, is drastic action for which warrant will have to be shown.

The development of aviation made by this country is something to be proud of, at least in its mechanical aspects. Col. Lindbergh's claim that the United States is far in the lead in almost every branch of commercial aviation may go unchallenged and he, undoubtedly correctly, gives the air mail credit for the greatest part of this progress. That development should not be arrested. Anything of evil that has cropped up in the process must be eliminated and its recurrence guarded against, but it ought to have been done without sweeping out the good with the bad. Substituting Army planes for the air mail service is a dubious device. The Army is neither equipped nor trained for the service, skilled and experienced as it is in its own field. To provide an emergency service means wasteful expenditure of public funds.

Col. Lindbergh's protest brings two of the country's most popular figures into dramatic conflict, and in this encounter of National idols President Roosevelt will be faced with a test. Col. Lindbergh, of course, does not come before the public with impartial hands. For the past twelve years, as he states, he has devoted himself to commercial aviation. His testimony is further impaired by the fact that he received stock in the company with which he is connected for almost a song. Yet, he has the right to ask that the companies shall have hearing. He has a right to demand that the hundreds of innocent employes of these concerns shall not be placed in the same category as the connivers and stock manipulators. We do not want a duel between the hero of the air and the hero of the radio, although that might be an absorbing contest in personal popularity. What we do want is the preservation of these lines and a cleaning up of the subsidy graft.

The only warrant for such drastic action as President Roosevelt has ordered would be evidence of which the public has no knowledge. If the President has this information, he can be sure of support in punishing the guilty severely, but their guilt must be established and the public fully informed.

BARGERON.

I HAVE been sitting here wondering if the leaders of the revolution think the scalp of the quiet-mannered, inoffensive Col. Brittin will be satisfying to their adherents. It won't be to me. Somehow I can't gloat over his predicament at all.

It is hard to explain, too, this attitude of mine. There was a time when I would have got a whale of a kick out of a man like the colonel being thrown in the bastile. A salutary lesson, I would have said, and I would have got blue in the face toward anyone who held a different view. But I don't feel this way about the colonel, not in the least.

Instead of a feeling of satisfaction, I have a feeling of disappointment about the whole thing; indeed, I am coming to feel a disappointment about the revolution.

* * * *

I think the reason is that the revolutionary leaders led me to expect bigger scalps. There were so many utterances about driving the money changers from the temple, about cracking down, that I thought Mr. Morgan's scalp would be rolling in the gutter long ere this; his and the scalps of all the vested interests, the Du Ponts, Henry Ford and the rest of them. Instead, I find a Du Pont down here working for the NRA, Henry being greeted as the apostle of a deal even better than the new one, and a bill sponsored by the Administration that will help Mr. Morgan get out from under the very expensive Postal Telegraph Co.

Why, when Crack-Down got to cracking down he cracked down on a small restaurant keeper or something of the sort out in the Middle West instead of a malefactor of great wealth. And now it is the scalp of Col. Brittin that we get.

* * * *

Now the revolutionaries can't present his scalp to me as that of a malefactor of great wealth. They can't get by with it, that's all; not even by wrapping the scalp in the tinsel of the big air-mail scandal with all of its staggering figures. The colonel was simply an innocent bystander, which suggests that the innocent bystanders will be the only ones to get hurt in the much-advertised clash.

Instead of being one of the malefactors of great wealth, one of the captains of finance who "led us to the brink of ruin," why, he was only the operating head of a small air line in the Middle West for which he received the vast sum of $10,000 or $12,000 a year, I forget which. And a conniver? I'll say he was. Do you know that he was down here to the National Capital conniving only a few months ago?

He was conniving before the NRA to get higher pay for the pilots. This because he felt so strongly about the hazardous nature of their work.

* * * *

Now there is no doubt that he destroyed certain papers under subpena, or, rather, he thought he had destroyed them. I have never seen any one so uncomfortable as he was before the Senate when what purported to be these same papers were produced. They had been obtained from the waste containers in the basement of the National Press Club.

But the fact that he destroyed them or tried to, gave them their only importance. Reading them closely I have been unable to find why they could not have been published to the world. Oh, there was one letter, in particular, which bore on the Democrats' contention that under the last Administration the mail subsidy was parceled out. Stacks of other correspondence had already shown this, however, long before the colonel was called. And furthermore, it was a matter known by Congress at the time, a matter that has been known all along.

The paper-destroying business, however, served the Democrats' purpose. It dramatized things, inflamed the public mind. There would not have been any dramatic canceling of all the contracts, otherwise.

Col. Brittin should have a Democratic medal instead of being in jail.

'Behind the News at The Post.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Rotogravure Section, "Behind the News at The Post," in today's Post, is a splendid and interesting section. You are to be congratulated on it.

I was particularly interested in the picture on page 4, lower left-hand section—the two men reading proof. To me it has the most human interest of any of the pictures. I wonder what life has held for them?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Accept my congratulations on the Rotogravure Section of The Post of February 11, showing the personnel and creative departments at work.

It looked workmanlike and indicative of the improvement shown in the finished article, your fine new paper.

I rejoice in the rebirth of a great newspaper and the resumption of its place in the homes and official life of Washington and the world.

MEXICO'S PENSION TROUBLES.

Economy has put the ax to another old Spanish custom, says the San Francisco Chronicle, one that has existed for 110 years, with Mexico's decision to stop the pensions paid to descendants of the Emperor Montezuma whose Aztec glory was overthrown by Cortez the Conquistador. In 1823 Mexico established this pension, but the commissioner now rules that because of historical inaccuracies it should not be paid any anyhow, it has been paid long enough. Thus is extinguished the last imperial claim in the republic.

No End of Books

On the E-RI-E.

"Low bridge, ev'rybody down
Low bridge, for we're going through a town,
And you'll always know your neighbor,
You'll always know your pal,
If you ever navigated on the Erie Canal."

The Canallers had other songs. When 15 miles a day looked very slow and a headwind came down out of Canada, they'd button up their jackets and bellow:

"Oh, the E-ri-e was a-rising
The gin was getting low
And I scarcely think
We'll get a drink
Till we get to Buffalo."

For 360 miles the canal stretched across New York State—"one continual stream of Venetianly corrupt and often lawless life," as Melville wrote. Forty years or so after 1817 the canal was in its prime. Then the railroads came, following like sheep in the same path the canal had found, and the old life on the Erie vanished. The canallers tied up at Rome or "Uticy;" the lock-men moved into the back-country and settled on farms; the trappers, traders, immigrants, fine ladies and gentlemen all disappeared, and weeds grew where the Dublin Queen and Rochester Belle had gone bubbling along.

It was a hardy and full-blooded day while it lasted, a piece of the American scene as native as a Mississippi steamboat or a pumpkin pie. We should have forgotten it almost entirely, I believe, if it had not been for Walter D. Edmonds.

• • • •

Out today is Edmonds' fourth book, "Mostly Canallers" (Atlantic Monthly Press—Little, Brown, $2.50). Three novels preceded it—"Rome Haul," in 1929; "The Big Barn," in 1930, and "Erie Water," in 1933. All these deal with one subject, the Erie Canal and its people. Together they form one of the very finest galleries in our time of regional literature.

"Mostly Canallers" is a collection of 24 short stories, all but four having appeared in periodicals ranging from the Harvard Advocate to the Saturday Evening Post. Of these published, Edward J. O'Brien reprinted four in his annual "Best Short Stories of the year," 12 others he rated at three stars (the highest), and 2 at two stars. That, you must agree, is a remarkable average, and reading the stories you will agree further that it is deserved.

Part of their hold upon us—a hold so sure that to read one tale is to be acutely hungry for more—lies, of course, in the material. The Erie forms no part of my family tradition; my great-grandfather went West across New York State before the canal was built, yet these stories of Edmunds give me a profound feeling of homesickness. Reading them is like returning to a youth, to a springtime. The canallers tie up at dusk before a tavern and their strong figures stand in the firelight, huge as Paul Bunyan, their strange oaths, "Cripus!" and "Jeepers!" ringing out in the night. The young girl comes out of the spring woods, running away from home, and escapes on a canal boat. The fat old woman shakes her head, wonders with the others in the cabin who killed Rutherford. The clerk puts on his best and ships West. The trapper flings his skins on deck and goes down to Schenectady. That is all. There are, to be sure, the story-teller's plots, the surprises and climaxes, but somehow they do not matter. It is the whole picture of that fresh and vibrant life which gets into our blood and fills us with nostalgia.

And the rest of that charm derives from Edmonds' skill in the telling. His methods have the prime merit of not obtruding. That is their only novelty. For he writes, not to show you experimental techniques, but to show you the colors and flavors, the intangible atmosphere and natural vitality of his scenes and characters. Granted that his subjects are free from our "modern" self-conscious complication, that his whole work points to an avoidance of explicit solution of "isms" and "ologies." But see very well that within his intentions he is completely at home—so much so that not until he is done do we realize the life we took part in was a matter of words and sentences. This, I maintain, is the only good writing.

Edmonds has achieved a distinctly sound position in American letters by "sticking to his last." He was born in 1903 in Boonville, New York, near the Black River Canal, a branch of the Erie. He went to Harvard (class of 1926), wrote stories about the canal for Prof. Copeland (the first one sold to Scribner's), and for the Advocate, Harvard's literary magazine, of which he became president. (Kendall Foss, member of the Post's National News Staff, was his successor in that office.) One of Edmonds' stories won second place in Harper's intercollegiate competition in 1926. After graduation, Edmonds returned to the canal country and continued writing. He is now married, and lived last winter in Cambridge. But every summer he goes back to Boonville, listens once again to the talk of the old canallers and their descendants, and puts it down cadence by cadence.

The result stands with the work of Mark Twain, George Cable, Sarah Orme Jewett and Bret Harte—masters of the American provincial type.

MILLARD E. TYDINGS, Senator from Maryland. In disgust at a Senate filibuster, he once offered to resign his seat but, as he wrote on another occasion, "I like the job." Anyway, he remains one of the Senate's younger generation. He was born 43 years ago at Havre de Grace. Lawyer, bachelor, popular extra man, amateur painter. Has a studio in his Georgetown house. Served as a private on the Mexican border, but worked up to be a lieutenant colonel in the World War and to win the D. S. M. Earnest, lively debater on the conservative side. Wrote "Counter-Attack." Nicknamed, obviously but not very aptly, "Glad Tydings."

Rep. Shoemaker in House Talk Flays 'Lorton College of Graft'

mitted there was a strange shortage of 875,083 of bricks recently from the workhouse wharf on Water street. The value at that time was $13,125.

Charges Widespread Graft.

For years, he declared, bootleggers have been getting sugar en route from the workhouse wharf to the prison for use in making their illicit spirits.

Shoemaker asserted it is "common knowledge that graft exists in practically every prison contract or purchasing order in which the prison officials are recipients of material gain."

Bischoff was the object of a prolonged attack on personal and official grounds. The Minnesota former convict roundly denounced Bischoff for his failure to provide for his wife, the famed Vivian Gordon, whose death created sensational news two years ago, and their daughter.

"Joy Riding on Potomac."

Bischoff was also charged with favoring certain business firms that he held stock in when selecting a competitive bidder.

Accounts at the prison are juggled both by prison officials and by prisoners at the direction of the officials, Shoemaker said, to the detriment of morale at the prison.

After asserting that Congress appropriated $25,000 for the purchase of a new tugboat for use of the prison some time ago and that a "third-hand" boat was bought, Shoemaker said:

"The warden spent over $2,000 to have built a beautiful mahogany launch for joy-riding purposes up and down the Potomac River, after the old boat had been mysteriously destroyed by fire."

Shoemaker concluded his blast by listing 18 specific charges against the Federal prison system, including Lorton. These ranged from "fraud and gross mismanagement" to "cruel and inhuman punishment of prisoners."

Barnard Demands Showdown.

Capt. Barnard said he would go before the District Commissioners and the Board of Public Welfare today and demand that the reformatory be cleared of the charges and that Shoemaker be made to prove his allegations or retract them.

"We have one of the cleanest penal institutions in the country," he said, "and one of the best doctors."

Capt. Barnard revealed that Dr. James G. Cumming, contagious disease officer of the Health Department, yesterday made a personal inspection of the 16 prisoners who had been removed from the prison laundry by Col. W. L. Peake after Shoemaker made his previous charge that the laundry was infested with a social disease.

"Dr. Cumming did not find one of them that has any trace of the disease," he said.

Shoemaker Claims Proof.

Implicit confidence was expressed by the superintendent in Bischoff. Capt. Barnard pointed out that all purchases for the prison have to be made through the District purchasing officer. He scoffed at the charges of petty thievery by officials and account juggling.

Several folders of letters were waved before the House members by Shoemaker as documentary evidence of his allegations, during his address, and he added that there was enough to indict officials in every prison in the country.

Shoemaker charged that "for years officials of the penitentiaries have been conducting petty thievery in which they have been stealing little gifts of money that have from time to time been donated to unfortunate prisoners by friends and relatives." He read a letter from C. W. Hanger, chief accountant at Lorton, admitting that there had been a shortage in the prisoners' canteen fund during two months in 1931 of $331.97. This shortage was discovered prior to the resignation of A. C. Tawse, former superintendent.

Views Public Health Menace.

As a means of escaping the competitive bidding requirement on all purchases above $25, Bischoff, in one instance, Shoemaker charged, used a series of small requisition orders, each below $25, until an entire order of supplies had been filled.

With scathing words he denounced Bischoff as "the hyena in human form who permitted his wife to be buried through the generosity and human kindness of the Actors' Guild of New York City." He also said there is a general rumor among prisoners in penitentiaries throughout the United States that "Bischoff sent some of his former students up to New York to eliminate his erstwhile family."

Repeating in more detail previous allegations that there are diseased prisoners in the kitchen and the laundry at Lorton, Shoemaker said the members of the House "are subjecting the highest officials in our land, including the President of the United States, to these germ carriers daily" through use of towels and other linen washed at the prison laundry.

Summarizes 18 Charges.

The 18 specific charges levelled at Lorton and other Federal prisons throughout the country were summarized by Shoemaker at the conclusion as follows:

1. Fraud—or gross mismanagement that amounts to fraud.
2. Monopolizing the District laundry and foundry business.
3. Larceny by personnel.
4. Dope traffic.
5. Degeneracy.
6. Criminal negligence.
7. Proven charges.
8. Juggling—prisoners' commissary and public welfare funds.
9. Diseased prisoners working in laundry, canning factory, barber shop, kitchen and mess hall, bakery and knitting mill.
10. Favoritism in competition building.
11. Prison doctors were charged with general incompetence.
12. Gross insanitary conditions in prisons.
13. Coddling of "big shots."
14. Drunkenness of prisoners and officers.
15. Fictitious balancing of Government ledgers.
16. Fomenting possible massacre and racial riots.
17. Cruel and inhuman punishment of prisoners.
18. No reform.

Natives Uneasy As Norris Dam Changes Habits

Long-Cherished Customs of Highlanders Face Encroachment.

Editor's note: Following is the fourth in a series of dispatches on the Tennessee Valley Program, detailing the building of Norris, model city and architect's dream.

(Copyright, 1934, by United Press.)

Norris, Tenn., Feb. 15 (U.P.).—The Tennessee Valley development, intended to bring happiness to millions, has brought sorrow to 200 pioneers of Union County, Tenn., whose ancestral homes soon will be at the bottom of an enormous lake.

To others it has brought a modicum of prosperity, to some hope, and to many a feeling of uneasiness over the changes which even now are being wrought in their lives.

The Union County farmers, led by Manny Miller, have written the Brazilian Embassy in Washington, inquiring about homesteads in South America. When the waters from Norris Dam flood their old homes two years from now, they hope to be pioneers again in a new country.

Miller, who lives about 2 miles from Maynardsville in a mountain fastness, is one of the oldest residents of the countryside—a giant of a man, typical of the Scotch, Irish and English stock which settled the mountain country soon after the American Revolution.

Keep Olden Custom.

The highlanders have kept to themselves. They have retained their Anglo-Saxon customs to such a degree that they still sing "Billy Boy," which was a popular ditty in England two centuries ago.

It is no uncommon sight even now to see a mountain woman striding down a trail with a shotgun under her arm. The smoke curling up from a clump of pines in an isolated gap may be from a still, where corn liquor of excellent quality is made.

When the dogwood is in bloom and the bass are biting in the mountain streams, the highlander knocks off work, whether on factory or farm, and takes to the hills. He is not in a hurry. He is an individualist, with a dignity of his own.

He hesitates to talk freely with newsmen. He answers questions politely enough, but with a "yes" or a "no." His thoughts are his own business.

Yet a young sawyer at Norris Dam, when given a light for his pipe and assured that his name would not be published, had this to say about the TVA as it has affected him:

"I'm earning the first cash money I've seen in two years, $18 a week. It's mighty good to buy tobacco again and take the old lady into town and buy her a dress."

Intrigued by Ice-box.

As for the future of the valley, the sawyer had little to say. He hoped his job would last. He thought maybe the houses in Norris were too fancy for him, but said his wife wanted one. She always kept her milk in the well, he said, and she was specially anxious to try one of the new electric ice boxes. She'd heard you could make ice cream in them, without hauling ice, or chopping it, or cranking the freezer, or anything. Even if she doesn't get a new house, the sawyer said, he'll buy her a refrigerator, that is, if his job holds out.

The TVA intends that the jobs of the 14,000 workers will hold out and that jobs for thousands more will be found when the valley's industries are established.

Tomorrow—Back to Knoxville and the three chiefs of the TVA, who ignore politics and work, according to one of their helpers, "like old-billy-get-out."

Merchants at Danville Charge Police Failure

Danville, Va., Feb. 15 (Spl.).—A delegation of merchants appeared before the city police commission to ask for better protection from robbers. The commission recommends adding three men to the police force if the city council will appropriate $3,600 for their salaries.

Chief of Police James Hannibal Martin asserted that special services demanded of the police are making it impossible for them to patrol the city properly. He specified police duty at funerals, marriages, school zones, athletic events and dances, and conveying pay rolls under guard and serving process papers for the juvenile court.

Speech on Austria.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 15 (Spl.). Events leading to the present Austrian unrest, the increase in countries ruled by virtual dictators and the significance of the present Austrian crisis were discussed last night before the Kiwanis Club by Prof. C. G. G. Moss, member of the State Teachers College faculty.

Col. Brittin 'Broke' Starts Term in Jail

compel the answering of questions and the production of evidence, and that MacCracken answered all questions asked and that all the evidence required was finally produced.

Counsel for both sides had been confronted with the question of whether a sentence by the Senate can become effective after the current session ends. It was obvious that a final decision on appeal, which undoubtedly will be carried to the Supreme Court, could not be obtained before the Senate adjourned. The stipulation entered into between Hogan and District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett, providing that neither this nor any other question would be raised should MacCracken lose his case on appeal, disposes of this question.

Brittin was taken to the District Jail at noon yesterday, the ten-day term starting at that time. If he serves his full sentence, he will be released February 24.

Jurney, who took Brittin to the jail, quoted him as saying he did not have enough money to perfect his appeal and that he had lost his job with the aviation company.

Novelist Wins Share In Guggenheim Estate

St. Louis, Feb. 15 (AP).—Mrs. Rose Winslow, New York novelist who writes under the pen name "Jane Burr," today won her fight for a third of the $450,000 estate of her father, Leopold M. Guggenheim, St. Louis capitalist.

A circuit court jury set aside Guggenheim's will and ratified a settlement whereby three heirs, Mrs. Winslow, Dr. Louis K. Guggenheim, St. Louis, and another daughter, Mrs. Selma Mayer, Chicago, will share equally in the estate.

Special Mail Cachet to Mark Assembly in First Capitol

Stamp Collectors Await Marking, Sponsored by Old Gazette.

Richmond, Feb. 15 (AP).—August Dietz, jr., stamp director of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, announced today that there will be a special marking for all collectors' mail sent from Williamsburg February 24, when the Virginia General Assembly meets in the reconstructed capitol there.

The special cachet will be sponsored by the Virginia Gazette, ancient weekly newspaper. The design, engraved by Mr. Dietz, has been approved by the City of Williamsburg. The mail will be postmarked at the time of the ceremonies.

John D. Rockefeller, jr., whose millians are making possible the restoration of Williamsburg, will be among the distinguished speakers when the Assembly meets there.

The cachet is the first of a series of official markings to be applied to collectors' mail at Williamsburg and is being awaited by philatelists.

There will be no charge for applying the marking, Mr. Dietz said, but covers should be sent to the Virginia Gazette before February 24.

The Once Over

MOOSE HOLLOW NEWS OF THE NEW DEAL.

Eb Benham, local director, put 20 men to work today on CWA projects such as moving snow piles from one side of the street to the other, leaning against no parking signs and brushing the dust off fire hydrants. Eb says he expects to be able to put another batch of deserving Democrats to work next week, using probably 50 men, 25 to start brush fires and 25 to put them out.

Luther Hendee, our local real estate broker, says things must have picked up a lot, as it has been nearly four months since any landlord was lynched for trying to collect a little something on back rents.

Chet Wesley says he heard quite a disturbance over in Possum Corners the other night and reckons Gen. Johnson must have been there making a speech denouncing chiselers.

Will Kennebunk, who will be remembered as having failed five times in business here and who lost all his wife's money in the stock market, is doing pretty well in New York, where he is writing magazine articles as an economic expert.

Walt Hawkins, local Democratic boss, has warned his constituents that hereafter they will have to play the dog races on their own money, as he can't get the NRA to lend any more money locally for such purposes.

Abner Cronk, the w. k. railroad man, reports that business on the D. P. & W. Line has improved so much that the engineers no longer stop and pick up hitch-hikers so the conductors can have company.

A NEW DEAL.

That theory about the gulf stream's moving closer to the Coast and causing milder winters has been, in a manner of speaking, devalued.

The United States Army will now deliver the air mail. A course in letter carrying will be established at West Point at once.

War Debt Cut Plan Dropped By President

Advisers Warn That Action Would Be Doomed to Failure.

larity, one authority said, would not be sufficient to win passage of any measure calling for cancellation or even drastic revision downward of the debts.

The state of the Nation's feelings toward the war debts was brought sharply to the fore in the Senate yesterday during a debate between Senator Robinson (Republican), Indiana, and majority leader Robinson of Arkansas. Robinson of Indiana sought to force consideration of his resolution calling upon President Roosevelt to report whether the Administration had made any agreements with debtor nations on the question of payment.

Deadlock Described.

In blocking consideration of the motion, the Democratic Robinson said:

"Public sentiment in nations that owe war debts to this country is so overwhelmingly opposed to payment of these obligations, that the governments dare not pay. Public sentiment at home would not approve cancellation or revision of these obligations.

"The situation is reaching a permanent deadlock and some time something will have to be done."

Democratic leaders express the belief that final passage of the Johnson bill, which will close the American money market to war debtors, would prove a powerful stimulus in encouraging them to reopen debt negotiations with this Government. The measure passed the Senate easily, without a record vote, and is awaiting action in the House, where passage is assured.

Senate leaders were surprised at the alacrity with which the Administration accepted the Johnson bill, after minor amendments had been made in the State Department.

Intended as Weapon.

A high official said the measure did not reflect a desire by this Government to retaliate against the debtor nations as much as a desire to give them a powerful weapon to force a change in sentiment at home.

"It will give them a chance to stew in their own juice for awhile," said the official.

Still another aspect of the Congressional viewpoint on foreign relations came when Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, expressed opposition to Administration plans to stimulate foreign trade by loans.

He said that the recent establishment of a Government export bank to finance trade with the Soviet Union and other nations could only succeed in increasing the amount of defaulted obligations to this country.

Realistic War Books.

The World War, which produced so many changes in so many different ways, had an enormous effect not only on the quality of war stories, but particularly on their attitude to war itself. When I was a boy, nearly all the novels and short stories about the Civil War were sentimental; the hero went away to fight the Southerners, was slightly but never fatally wounded, and returned to his girl improved physically, mentally, spiritually. The only casualties happened to unimportant persons, who supplied a good background for the hero. And the four years' war itself was written about as if it had been a grand football game, after which both sides felt better.

A tremendous contrast to all this came in the literature, both in verse and prose, that followed the World War, and it was characteristic of all countries. The soldiers who had fought in the trenches, and survived to tell the tale, told it without a particle of sentimentality; they seemed determined to represent the war as something repulsive and horrible; many of them were so embittered that our famous American novelist, Anne Sedgwick, felt called upon to remind them that those who remained at home also suffered.

Now this new attitude toward war, characteristic only of recent times, began with the great Tolstoi. He was a Russian lieutenant in the Crimean War, exposed to shell fire. He wrote three sketches which were the beginning of his literary career and called them Sevastopol. Here there was no sentiment and no partisanship. He wrote about what actually happened both in the field of battle, and in the minds of the soldiers. Other Russians, like Garshin and Andreyev, followed his method.

In France, after the war of 1870, Emile Zola wrote his masterpiece, "The Downfall." This is much the greatest of all his novels, and I think it will survive all his other works. He described without a trace of sentiment, the physical feeling of the troops when they were for the first time under fire.

In America, an epoch-making novel was written by Stephen Crane, called "The Red Badge of Courage," which has already become a classic.

New Screen and Stage Programs Opening Today and Tomorrow in Downtown Area

Garbo Scales New Heights In Latest Hit

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

After an absence from the screen of two years, Greta Garbo returns more beautiful, more glamorous, more commanding than ever in the dramatic Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer triumph, "Queen Christina," which Loew's Palace Theater will unfold tomorrow for the first time at popular prices.

In this film Garbo is said to surpass anything she has ever done and is said, further, to give vitality to a difficult role, inspired by the brilliant direction of Rouben Mamoulian.

John Gilbert, who played opposite Garbo in the silent pictures, is her romantic lead for the first time in five years. Ian Keith, Lewis Stone, Elizabeth Young, C. Aubrey Smith, Reginald Owen, Gustax von Seffertitz and David Torrence are included in a superb supporting cast.

It is Garbo's most engaging picture and one that critics and audiences are unanimous in placing in that category of films that must not be missed.

Fashion Show Moves to Met

With requests from many patrons who were unable to see "Fashions Follies of 1934" when it played at the Earle, Warner Bros.' officials have acceded to popular clamor and announce a return engagement, starting tomorrow at Warner Bros.' Metropolitan Theater.

Fan dancers, stars and gorgeous gowns are the attractions offered in "Fashions Follies of 1934," the First National picture. This picture, among the most lavish ever produced, stars William Powell and Bette Davis.

The story is an hilarious comedy-romance, revolving about a high-pressure promoter, who corners the Paris and New York fashion markets.

Busby Berkeley directed the spectacular numbers of "Fashions Follies of 1934," which have received applause every time they have been viewed. Fan dancers provide the color and beauty in these daring scenes.

Bette Davis has the leading feminine role opposite Powell, while Verree Teasdale is her rival in love. Others in the cast are Frank McHugh, Reginald Owen, Henry O'Neill, Hugh Herbert, Philip Reed, Gordon Westcott, Dorothy Burgess and many others.

Short subjects, including a Block and Sully comedy, a Jack Denny musical subject and the latest issue of the Paramount Sound News complete the program.

Popular Revue And Gay Farce

The 1934 edition of the "Greenwich Village Follies," one of Broadway's most entertaining revues, with a cast of 60 talented performers, headed by those international comic favorites, Yorke and King, will be offered to patrons of Loew's Fox Theater, starting tomorrow, at popular prices.

Supplementing this stage attraction is the screen comedy, "Sons of the Desert," that presents Laurel and Hardy in a full-length farce. Charley Chase, Mae Busch, Dorothy Christy and Lucien Littlefield comprise the comedy support.

"Sons of the Desert" tells the hilarious story of Laurel and Hardy, who deceive their wives in order to attend the convention of their lodge in a distant city. When their irate wives find out there are some mighty hectic episodes enacted.

The "Greenwich Village Follies" is a spectacular whirl of songs, comedy and beautiful girls. In addition to the featured comedy team of Yorke and King, this revue will feature Coley Worth, comedian; Edith Drake, prima donna; Ayres and Rene, with Resche, adagio dancers; Ernest Charles, tenor; True York and the Greenwich Village male octette, plus an array of 30 alluring beauties.

As added attractions there are the Three California Red-Heads and Ruby Norton, musical comedy headliner.

Rowdy Comedy Runs Rampant

The largest collection of stellar talent ever recruited for a feature comedy is represented in "Palooka," the United Artist film, which comes to RKO-Keith's today.

That collection consists of Jimmie Durante, Lupe Velez, Stuart Irwin, Marjorie Rambeau, Robert Armstrong, Thelma Todd, William Cagney (brother of Jimmy in his cinema debut), Mary Carlisle and others, with Gus Arnheim and his orchestra thrown in for good measure.

"Palooka" is an hilarious cinema concoction which tells the story of a lovable but not-quite-bright lad, whose mother tries to prevent him from going the way of his bright-light dad. "Stu" Irwin plays the title role, Marjorie Rambeau is seen as the mother and Armstrong is cast as his pa. Durante plays "Knobby" Walsh, fight promoter. Lupe is the volatile night club entertainer who dazzles him into forgetting home, mother and sweetheart, Mary Carlisle. Thelma Todd plays Ma Palooka's rival for the affections of the senior Palooka, while young Cagney is seen as the flustering sweetie to whom the fickle Lupe returns when young Palooka's lucky star wanes.

Express Train Scene of Play

With the action occurring on an Oriental express tratin, operating between Calcutta and Bombay, India, "Bombay Mail," starring Edmund Lowe, comes to the Rialto Theater today as the featured attraction.

Edwin L. Marin directed the film from a screen play by Tom Reed, who adapted the story from the novel of the same name by L. G. Blochman.

Supporting Edmund Lowe are Onslow Stevens, Shirley Grey, Ralph Forbes, Hedda Hopper, Tom Moore, John Wray, Ferdinand Gottschalk, George Renavent, Huntley Gordon, Herbert Corthell and Brandon Hurst.

The story of "Bombay Mail" is the tale of a twin murder on a racing train. More than a dozen people are suspected. The locale of the story is the mysterious and baffling "Mother India," where anything can and does happen.

Joan Blondell As Phone Girl

"I've Got Your Number," Warner Bros. latest comedy, with more laughs than "Convention City," comes to the screen at Warner Bros. Earle Theater tomorrow.

"I've Got Your Number," dealing with the romance of the telephone, pictures in sweeping panorama, the vital activities of telephone employes in their contacts with the public and with each other. It dramatizes the colorful incidents of everyday life to the throbbing pulse of human emotions.

The picture is said to touch on every phase of life behind the scenes of telephone operation, revealing its laughter and its love, its tragedy and thrills. The story is in fast tempo, and the dialogue unusually snappy with plenty of action and a great deal of suspense, culminating in a smashing climax in a terrific battle with a band of robbers and kidnapers.

Joan Blondell heads a large and talented cast of players in the role of a telephone operator who is used as a cat's-paw by the crooks and lands in jail as their accomplice, only to be extricated by Pat O'Brien, who plays opposite her as a trouble shooter of the telephone company, a swaggering person equally successful in smashing the hearts of fair ladies and gangsters' heads.

The Principals in "Devil Tiger" —Columbia.

Bette Davis in "Fashions of 1934" —Metropolitan.

Jungle Terror Shown in Film

"Devil Tiger," one of the most thrilling wild animal pictures ever filmed, comes to Loew's Columbia Theater tomorrow, and brings to the screen the blood-curdling ferocity of the Asiatic Jungles.

The stage program will be headed by Ken Murray, the original funster of stage, screen and radio, supported by Helen and Milton Charleston and "Rubberlegs" Edwards, in a 20-minute dance and song funfest. Other acts will be Jean Sargent, charming star of radio; "Flying Colors," and "Face the Music;" Five Maxellos and Four Franks, youthful stars of steps and tunes.

It is an absorbing picturization of three intrepid humans, who cut their way through the tangles of a hitherto unexplored jungle and who face one catastrophe after another, until they are all but swallowed up by the ravages of the wilderness.

Huge, man-eating animals continually battling for supremacy in the jungle, some never before seen on the screen, including the monstrous Devil Tiger, bring a succession of thrills.

In addition to the exciting episodes provided by the recurrent clashes of these jungle beasts, there is a pleasing romance that has its beginning in the very heart of this jungle, and also the engrossing drama of a white man, a white girl and a 7-year-old native waif who are lost in this terrifying section.

Treasury Acts To Halt Cooper Bank Appeal

Department to Oppose Any Move to Oust Receiver.

Officials of the Treasury Department yesterday moved to block in District Court of Appeals efforts of Col. Wade H. Cooper to have the appointment of Carter B. Keene as receiver for the closed United States Savings Bank set aside pending the outcome of an appeal which Col. Cooper is now perfecting.

Col. Cooper has asked the Court of Appeals to stay Keene's appointment. The banker pointed out that Keene would proceed to liquidate the bank and close its affairs, so that if the pending appeal is finally reversed, the bank would scarcely be in a position to renew operations.

The Treasury Department yesterday declared further delay in making payments to depositors and creditors of the bank would work an undue hardship. Further, in a memorandum filed with the court, the indictment of Col. Cooper for alleged misapplication of the funds of the closed Commercial National Bank was cited.

The United States Bank has remained closed since the banking holiday of last March despite insistent efforts by Col. Cooper, its president and a majority stockholder, to reopen it. He has advanced to the Comptroller of the Currency numerous plans for the reopening, but none has been approved.

The rejection of the last plan caused Col. Cooper to carry his fight to the courts, where Justice Jennings Bailey, of the District Supreme Court, ruled against him. The appeal now in the Court of Appeals involves the correctness of that ruling.

President Inspects Stream-Lined Train

Col. Brittin, Jail File Clerk, Sleeps in 'Room' With 70 Men

Airway Official Serves First Day of Term for Contempt.

L. H. Brittin, erstwhile vice president of the Northwest Airways, slept in a dormitory with 70 other prisoners at the District Jail last night, after serving the first of his ten-day sentence for contempt of the Senate.

The airways official spent most of yesterday engaged in carrying out the duties of a trusty file clerk at the District Jail. Superintendent T. M. Rives had put him to work as soon as the portals clanked shut and he had been fingerprinted, registered and shown his prison quarters.

Brittin is receiving the same treatment accorded Harry F. Sinclair, oil magnate, who several years ago incurred the displeasure of the Senate and served time in the District Jail.

During his ten-day stretch, Mr. Brittin can look forward to a tempting dish of fruit jello as his reward for diligent application to his tasks. This is a reward which jail officials hold out to prisoners whose deportment is proper.

Contrasted to the Willard Hotel, where Mr. Brittin was confined after his arrest and during his hearing by the Senate, the breakfast fare this morning will be oatmeal, coffee and bologna.

Yesterday Mr. Brittin had succotash, bread, water and bacon for luncheon, while the jail chef had prepared for him and 1,200 other prisoners a meal of macaroni, canned tomatoes, cheese, bread and tea for supper.

Brittin declined to see reporters or other visitors yesterday and Superintendent Rives saw that this was carried out. He sent out word that he had "nothing to say."

Roosevelt Sees Stream-Lined Motored Train

Inspects Novel Coaches With Interest, But Declines Ride.

President Roosevelt yesterday evinced keen interest in the Union Pacific's new stream-lined motor train, which he inspected in company with a host of Government officials and executives of the railroad.

He headed a White House automobile procession to the station, and up to the last some prospect existed that he would make the train's trip to Baltimore and return. This he decided not to do, however, contenting himself with an inspection of the train.

At the station were Carl R. Gray, president of the Union Pacific; W. Averill Harriman, a director of the road and NRA division administrator, who conducted the President through one of the cars, and a score of Administration leaders. Mr. Roosevelt asked questions, posed for pictures and watched intently as the latest railroad transportation glided smoothly north.

Capable of a speed of 110 miles an hour, the train is now on a tour of the country before going into service at Omaha, Nebr. It is colored yellow and dark brown, is 204 feet long with two coach buffet cars, and an "engine" that houses a large motor using distillate instead of gasoline.

Among the presidential party were Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall, Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury; Henry Morgenthau, sr., and two White House secretaries, Louis McHenry Howe and Marvin H. McIntyre. Others who joined the President at the station included Budget Director Lewis W. Douglas, Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC, and Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the board of the United States Steel Corporation.

Brilliant Attack Versus Brilliant Defense.

One of the most amazing, spectacular and, at the same time, accurate series of attacking and defending plays I have ever run across is in the hand below, which came to me recently from one of the leading Bridge players in Germany. If Germans play Bridge with such accuracy and deep insight into the possibilities of the game, they certainly will prove dangerous opponents in any international competition. Usually a hand is considered very fine when it contains one brilliant coup, whether made by the defending players or by the Declarer. When brilliant play, splendidly conceived to bring about the defeat of a contract, is met by an equally brilliant response, it is not strange that it is hard to find words to describe it.

The hand which presented all these interesting angles was:

North, Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ 6 ♡ A Q 8 6 4 ◇ K 6 ♣ A K 6 4 3
♠ 8 7 3 2 ♡ 10 9 3 ◇ 3 ♣ 10 9 8 7 2	N W E S	♠ K 4 ♡ K J 7 5 ◇ A Q 10 ♣ 4 2
	♠ A Q J 10 9 5 ♡ 2 ◇ J 9 8 7 5 ♣ 5

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♡	2◇	2♠	Pass
3♣	Pass	4♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

While there is an element of optimism in South's bidding, he does not expect to lose three tricks in diamonds in view of East's vulnerable Overcall of his partner's Opening bid. There is a chance that if the diamond losses can be held to two tricks, the contract can be made.

West's Opening lead was the diamond 3, upon which the six was played from Dummy. East played the Queen, which held the trick, and returned the Ace. He could now see the possibility of defeating the contract if his partner could be induced to ruff the diamond return low and force the singleton spade from the Dummy so that a finesse could not be taken through East's King. He therefore led a small diamond, which South covered; and West, amazingly enough, understood his partner's message and ruffed with the deuce of spades. The Declarer, at this point, studied long before playing from the Dummy. Eventually he decided that this play did not disclose a trump holding of the King-eight-seven or more in the East hand, but was designed to prevent a finesse through the singly guarded King in the East hand. South therefore refused to over-ruff and permitted West to hold the trick. At this point, West returned the heart Ten and South went up with the Ace, led the six of spades successfully, finessed against the King, drew the adverse trumps and fulfilled his contract.

The reader will observe that East's plan was well conceived. Had the spade six in Dummy been used to over-ruff the deuce, East must then have obtained the lead on the second round of trumps, when he could have returned one more diamond, which West, with his four trumps, would have been able to ruff, thus defeating the contract.

It was a brilliant stratagem, but the one by which South combated it was even more so.

Tomorrow's Hand.

If South is playing a contract of seven diamonds and the Opening lead is the King of spades, what is his best line of play?

West, Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ A 2 ♡ A K 10 9 ◇ A K J 7 6 5 2 ♣ —
♠ K Q 10 4 3 ♡ Q J 7 5 4 ◇ — ♣ A 10 7	N W E S	♠ 9 7 6 5 ♡ 3 2 ◇ 10 ♣ Q 6 5 4 3 2
	♠ J 8 ♡ 8 6 ◇ Q 9 8 4 3 ♣ K J 9 8

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Rushville, Ind., Feb. 15 (AP).—James Clinton, 63, a Rush County farmer, today committed suicide after shooting and killing his wife, Edith, 62, and wounding his son, Paul, 35.

Lost Faith

Nature's Heating Fails at 22 Below.

Mr. and Mrs. Barney Bernard don't trust nature as they once did.

The keeper of Old Faithful Hotel in Yellowstone National Park and his wife have lived a dozen years in a cottage which was heated with hot water from a natural hot spring.

It never failed them—until a few days ago when the thermometer outside registered 22 below zero. Suddenly the spring water disappeared, the house became frigid, pipes burst, food froze. Flowers, lettuce, radishes and green tomatoes in the greenhouse, heated by the same system, were frozen stiff.

The pool has been filled again, and water is now running through the repaired pipes, but it is only lukewarm. No matter how hot it may get again, said the keeper in his report to Washington, he and his wife will not feel secure without other provision for heating, should nature play another trick on them.

Man With a Conscience Gives Up After 8 Years

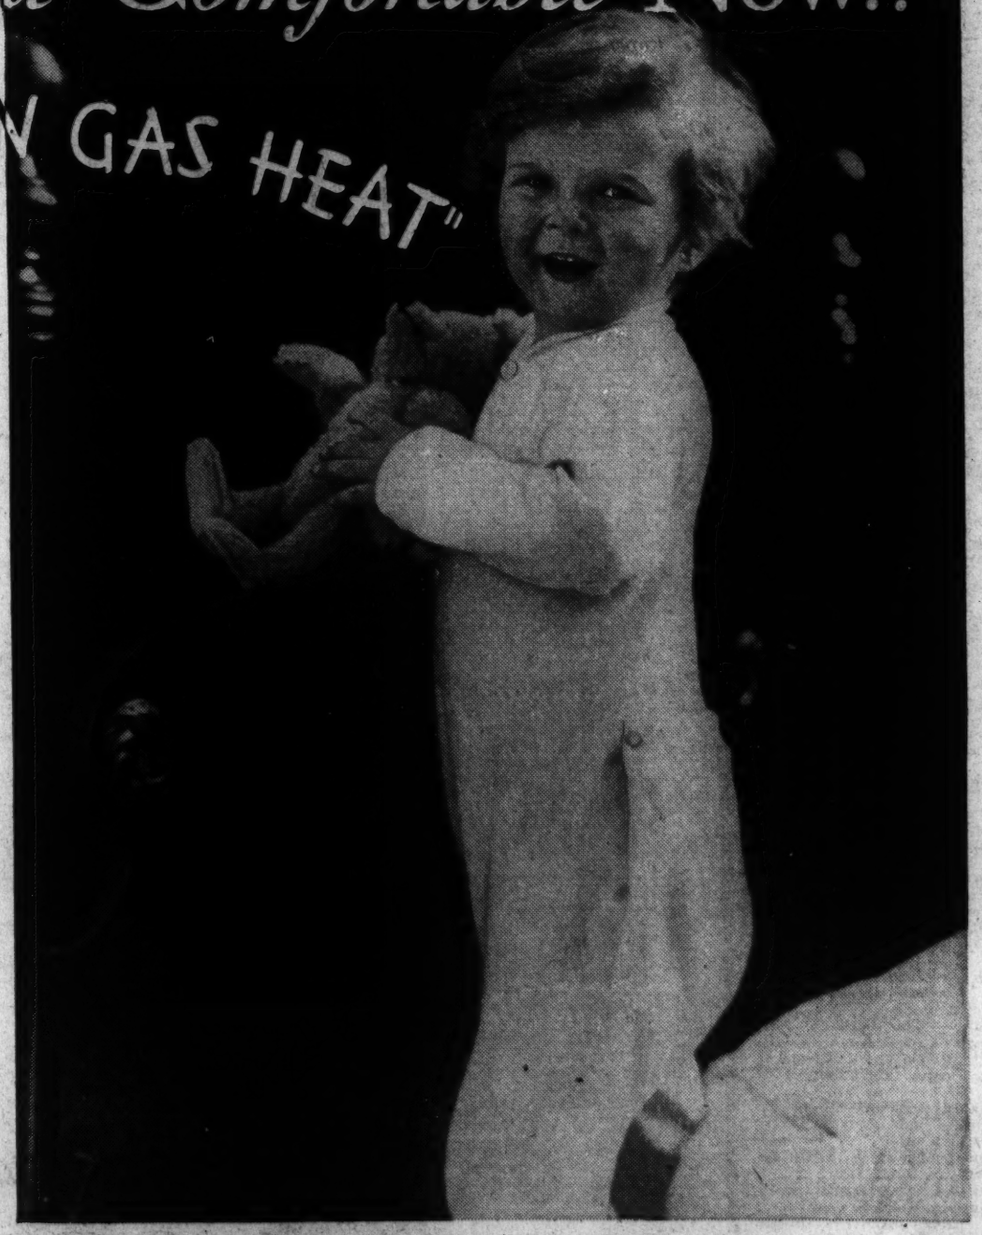
"MY DADDY PUT IN GAS HEAT"



Temperamental weather can tear and howl around Washington now, but the only effect in this household will be snug and comfortable warmth. For "Daddy" decided to "fire" his old-fashioned furnace for the last time—"fire" it right out of the house and put in an automatic gas heating plant.

Gas heating responds instantly to the sudden changes of weather so familiar to Washington home owners—is the only truly automatic method of heating. You don't have to store fuel, order it, or worry yourself with the furnace. A simple thermostat automatically regulates it to the degree of warmth you desire.

A Sound and Wise Investment . . .

Gas heating plants are built for extremely long life, with no motors or complicated machinery to get out of order. They are silent, clean and compact and efficiently serviced by your Gas Company. Washington too, enjoys one of the lowest gas rates for home heating on the Atlantic seaboard.

Automatic Gas Heating Plants are quickly and easily installed

Dead winter is not too late to install gas heat, nor do you have to give up your present heating plant. It takes less than a day to make the change, whether you put in a complete new gas-burning unit, or a unit which will convert your present furnace. A small down payment is all that is required—the balance in convenient monthly payments. Why not call DIstrict 8500 and let us tell you just what it will cost to heat your home with gas.

Famous Beauty Worker Enters American Field

Favorite of Royalty Makes Her Skin Preparations Available Here.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

For 30 years American women who traveled in Europe heard much about cetrain French beauty preparations. But they were unable to purchase them.

Madame la doctoresse, who had a most exclusive clientele. She sold these products only to the European nobility, and would occasionally make exceptions and sell them to famous beauties of the day. But never to an American.

Five years ago, however, demands exceeded her resistance and she brought her lotions and cream to New York. News of this spread like wild fire from one woman to another, and madame was overjoyed at her reception.

She was no ordinary cosmetician She was a dermatologist known the length and breadth of Europe. She had been decorated by the King of Sweden for her work. She was contantly being called from one royal place to another to advise, massage and foster the beauty of queens and princesses. In Paris her salon was always filled with women whose patronage was the highest guarantee.

When she came to this country to establish her salon here it was still the choicest clientele which came to her. Gradually invitations came to her from stores over a wide area to sell her products at their counters. At first she refused. But two years ago she conceded. Now it is possible to buy these here in Washington.

She puts out four lotions and one cream for a complete treatment. These are sufficient to care for the most obstreperous skin. The cream looks and smells like strawberry ice cream. But it has an amazing potency. It cleanses, nourishes and bleaches. By removing the dead skin it unclogs the pores, gives them utter aeration and freedom. It has only to be gently rubbed on, and after that it does its own work. After it has been on for a few minutes it should be removed with a soft tissue.

One of the lotions is a skin tonic which exercises the delicate muscles of the face. The result is to give a becoming muscular firmness, and do away with skin flabbiness.

A second lotion is an astringent—one of the few on the market which do not have to be followed by a nourishing cream. Its splendid for that "6 o'clock face." When a woman dashes home from the office, or from shopping, and has to rejuvenate herself in a scant half hour she will find that she may be singularly successful by first cleansing her face with the cream and then applying this enlivening liquid. But she must keep it out of sight of husband. Men, it seems, love to use it after shaving, and unless a wife is careful she's apt to find one more empty bottle on her dressing table and one more beaming countenance in the household.

The third lotion is a protective foundation lotion which blends instantly with the skin. It is not a liquid powder, but simply for keeping the powder on even and smoothly, and protecting the skin from extraneous influences.

The circulation loton does the most amazing things. Besides taking away blackheads and blemishes, it normalizes the pores and keeps the neck firm. Use of it seems actually to erase sallowness and discoloration, and to invigorate lazy skins. This should be used scantily, and only two or three times a week, at most.

Madame's representative, a woman who has studied under madame herself, is in town now and will be delighted to tell Washington women more about the true effectiveness of these preparations. She was formerly on the stage and with the ability of an actress can make her subject extremely interesting. Incidentally she's an excellent example of what the products can do.

Disguised Powder Puffs.

If one needs powder puffs it's a very good time to buy them. An F street shop is selling some, not only very fine powder puffs but also done up in a most attractive way. They come in little round glass cigarette boxes daringly painted on the outside with blue nymphs dancing gayly in an insinuated breeze; a warm breeze we'd judge by their lack of attire.

They would ordinarily sell at considerably more than the present price. But stores have generous streaks now and then, and console consistent shoppers with interesting little bargain items of this kind.

Ingenious Ice Tongs.

The barbaric ice tongs we've been putting up with these many years might be on the verge of disappearing if the new tongs on the market are as well received as we predict they will be.

These are ingeniously designed to catch a firm grasp on slippery cubicles and hold them tightly until we press the lever for release. Furthermore, they're small enough to be easily handled.

More Sophisticated Colors Displace Pale Tints So Long Popular for the Young Girl's Room

Miss Maxson Tells Secret of Attractive New Decoration Scheme.

By Jo Ellen Maxson.

The pale pinks and blues that formerly characterized a young girl's room have given way to more sophisticated color effects in keeping with the interests and personality of the modern girl.

One delightful room has for its color scheme the unusual combination of navy blue, rose and chalk white. This is worked out effectively at the windows in straight-hanging glass curtains of white dotted swiss with narrow ruffles. A band of rose moire ribbon stitched over the seam which joins the ruffle to the curtain brings in a note of color.

The drapes of navy blue starched voile have wide ruffles which are also joined with a band of rose moire ribbon. These are draped back over disks of clear glass.

The white dotted swiss bed spread has three tiers of ruffles along each side, which carry out the color scheme with bindings of rose moire.

The walls, painted a soft, dusty rose, are accented by a simple stencil border design in white. The woodwork is flat white. The floor is covered with a dark rug which has a small pattern of flowers in rose and mauve scattered through it.

A dressing table with a standing mirror is draped in a ruffled skirt of navy blue starched voile bound in the rose moire. Lamps on either side of the dressing table have slender column bases of clear glass and plaited white parchment shades.

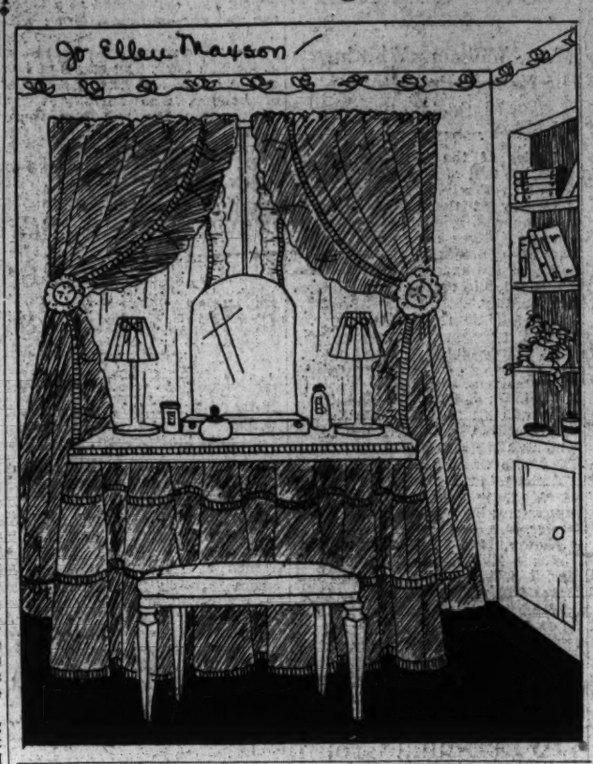
Miss Maxson will be glad to give individual help in home decorating problems. Write her in care of The Washington Post.



How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. Evans.

Still After Decay.

A solution of the problem of dental decay is well on the way. It will not be many years until we know just how and why teeth decay. At this time the process can be prevented, and even the walls of a cavity can be made to become hard or even to be reenameled. In some future day we will have all the information needed, for we have much of it now.

The remaining problems will be how to get the facts to the people, and how to get them to make use of them—neither problem altogether easy to accomplish.

The dentists are waging a red hot battle or, rather, a hard fought war on the subject. When they get through the truth will be available. One side claims that brushing and cleaning the teeth is all important. In their view decay is the result of the action of bacteria. These grow on remnants of food and secrete acids which rob areas of the teeth of its minerals. Next, other ferments secreted by the bacteria destroy the organic matter. The two processes combined make what is called tooth decay.

Another group says decay is the result of poor quality of the tooth which, in turn, is the result of poor nutrition. This group divides into several subgroups, one of which thinks decay is caused by eating soft foods and too little grinding and chewing.

Another side regards it as the result of eating foods deficient in minerals, and especially phosphorus and lime. Several other groups regard it as due to eating foods that are deficient in vitamins. Here, too, there is a further subdivision. Some think vitamin A deficiency is responsible, and advise a diet rich in fruits. Some think lack of vitamin D is the cause, and advise a diet rich in this vitamin. Some suggest deficiencies in vitamin B.

Dr. W. A. Price has made a world-wide study, which has led him to think there is some truth in each of these theories but, in addition, he offers another point of view. His study included groups of people in some parts of the world where there are almost no decayed teeth and in other regions where decay is prevalent.

His conclusion is that fabrication of food is the principal cause of tooth decay. Above all, it is important that when we eat grain we should limit ourselves to grain that has been freed of dirt but, after that, ground or broken in such a way as that it contains all the minerals and vitamins. It is a matter of indifference whether the grain is wheat, rye, barley, or oats, or whether it is ground coarse or fine.

An important part of his theory is that the key to the situation is the saliva. If this secretion has an ample supply of buffer the teeth do not decay. Otherwise they do.

Bike Suit, Tricky Ensemble, Wins Miami Beach Popularity

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 15.—Since the day of the automobile duster, costumes for vehicular travel have been designed according to the demanding cheeps of the weather bird. This season at Miami Beach, however, is seeing the introduction of a strictly fair weather garment—the new bicycle suit, created to absorb the maximum amount of sunshine and style.

Nifty bike suits worn with saucy little chaps and childish shoes and socks are a case of love at first sight with the winter colony here, and the way these tricky ensembles spirit away the years from their wearers insures a popular Northern summer for both the suits and their owners.

So important has the bicycle suit become that it is being featured at all of the showings of styles for spring as presented by the exclusive branches of New York shops here, and is endowed with all of the individuality of an original Paris model. Brevity, color and variety are the only words that can describe bicycle costumes as a whole as seen at Miami Beach.

The neat costume of the Alpine guide has been the inspiration of a clever bicycle suit, which, with its short suspender top gray trousers, concarno red shirt, and mountain green cap is Tyrolian in color as well as design. Flannel, sail cloth, or ribbed wool is being used in fashioning these costumes.

A suit of brilliant celanese made a flash of color under the palms the other day as its owner pedaled down Ocean drive. Her costume of navy blue shorts, scarlet shirt, and one of the new sundial hats of red straw was accented by a white canteen bag slung carelessly over her shoulder.

Gay bandanna tops and bell-hop jackets are being worn with the new length sport shorts, which reach almost to the knee. White gabardine shorts when combined with a bright blouse makes a practical costume for bicycling that has the additional advantage of being flattering to the figure as it features straight slenderizing lines.

Doctor Sees Danger In 'Growing Pains'

May Be Rheumatic Fever, McGill Expert Says.

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 15 (AP).—"Growing pains" of children often are attacks of rheumatic fever, Dr. J. C. Meakins, or Montreal, said today in warning mothers that rheumatic fever is more deadly than cancer or tuberculosis.

The head of the medical department of McGill University said "it is time that the public realized that most of the deaths from heart disease can be traced to rheumatic fever, possibly suffered in childhood."

"A sore throat that does not come from a tonsil infection, an unexplained fever that lasts only for a few days, or aching limbs that soon return to normal—any of these may be the beginning of rheumatic fever," he continued. "The treatment is immediate and complete rest and relaxation—not for two weeks, but for two years, if necessary."

Mrs. Roosevelt Sees Workers' Diets at Cornell

Scientific Foods Developed to Nourish Masses at Low Cost.

Ithaca, N. Y., Feb. 15 (AP).—Set up for inspection by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt here today was the scientific, mass-production result of serving a new menu at the White House.

She pioneered the menu in Washington recently. The result is that the Cornell Research Foundation, which controls these products, has just licensed manufacturers to produce three of them in sufficient volume to feed millions of relief agency beneficiaries.

The foods are wheat, corn and oats, specially treated and with milk added. The contract figures were not given out, but it was made known that the milk fraction alone is large enough to supply New York City with all its milk for 12 days.

Meals for Few Cents.

The new foods were designed to give the poor meals costing only a few cents each, yet containing more nourishment than many affluent families purchase habitually. The underlying idea was that millions of unemployed need more than money for complete restoration to usefulness.

Months of experiment with the new foods, as bread, muffins, soups, pancakes and cereals, at the Cornell College of Home Economics seem to indicate that the dietary scientists have found a working plan new for humans. They borrowed this plan, ready made, from 10 years' experience in producing near miracles in improving animals by diet.

Part of the substances for the animals were so-called industrial waste products of human food processing. This waste was not merely brans from hulls, but the embryo of grains, and vitamins and minerals. In the new Cornell food these elements are restored for human consumption.

Lessons From Animals.

"Until a few years ago," said H. E. Babcack, a director of the Cornell Reserach Foundation, "we lost 25 to 30 per cent of young chicks, due to faulty diet. Now we lose none from that cause. We hope to do something like that for humans.

"No one would think of taking horses which had not worked for months and had fed only on hay, and putting them to work without first feeding them other foods to get their strength up. Yet we take men who have been undernourished, load them into trucks and expect them to work with pick and shovel.

"We think that in diet men should be given as much chance as horses, cows and chickens. In Cleveland I saw truckloads of newly employed stopped to give each man a doughnut and a cup of coffee. That was fine, as far as it went. It made their stomachs feel better, but it hadn't much food value.

"It should be possible to give those workers real food they need, and at no more cost."

Development of Cornell foods is sponsored by the Cornell Reserach Foundation of which Maj. Robert E. Treman, of Ithaca, is president. Recently half a million New York State families have had these new diets.

Men at Last Convinced That Too Much Hat Wastes Energy.

By Amos Parrish.

New York, Feb. 15.—It took no fashion pace-setter to lead American men to the newer kind of felt hats. It took only hard-headed common sense to convince men that an ounce of superflous headgear is just so much waste energy.

So the 1934 idea in men's hats is lightheadedness. It's a bare four ounces of fine, soft, molded felt. Just a feather of a hat. As light on your head as your hair.

There was a time when featherweight felts were entirely imported, and beyond John Q. Citizen's reach. And there was a later time when domestic lightweight felts were as limp as they were light.

But American hatmakers lived and learned. And they finally developed a lightweight felt durable and wearable enough to convince most men they should wear one.

New Lightweights Durable.

That's the story of this spring 1934 headpiece. Not only is it light. But it can take it. You can slap it on . . . yank it off . . . crush it in your topcoat pocket . . . stick it in your suitcase . . . crumple it in your hand. You can be as tough with it as you want. It doesn't care.

Another thing men like about these new lightweights is the way their live, good-to-look-at lines adjust themselves to all kinds and shapes of faces . . . and no matter how the hat is put on.

And, incidentally (motorists especially will appreciate this), once these hats are on, they're on!

Trend to Lighter Shades.

You'll notice that the majority of men who pick lightweights these next two months will wear them in medium and light shades of gray and tan. This even goes to the point of including offwhite hats and very light tans . . . especially in the warmer sections of the country.

The lightweight idea also goes for the mixture type felt hat which got to be such a favorite last fall. This spring you'll be able to get, in the regular lightweights, those rich colorings only obtainable in a rough-mixture felt.

And remember, a featherweight felt is as right for business wear as it is comfortable for sports occasions. It will be in fashion wherever men decide to let comfort, common sense and trim appearance dictate their choice. Which will be just about everywhere.

Men's hats of the types described are available in Washington in all the better shops and department stores.

Gallows of Chance

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

The Story Thus Far.

Sir Humphrey Rossiter, England's young home secretary, returning to London in a rented automobile after visiting Lord Edward Keynsham in Norfolk County, is seized by a band of masked men who take him to a building resembling a prison. They place him upon a gallows and demand he grant a reprieve to Cecil Brandt, doomed to be hanged for murder the next morning. Refusing to agree, a hangman approaches the gallows. A messenger arrives with word that Mrs. Brandt is at Rossiter's London home with fresh evidence. He is released, hears Mrs. Brandt's story and agrees to grant a reprieve.

She leaves; he picks up his telephone to call Wandsworth Prison—and collapses in a faint. When he regains consciousness he learns that Brandt has been hanged. Mrs. Brandt disappears on her way to have dinner with Rossiter. Scotland Yard operatives find him missing when they answer a summons to his home. Young Detective Pank goes to Norwich and learns that Lord Edward Keynsham engineered the abduction of Rossiter the night before Brandt's execution.

Rossiter returns home, but refuses to tell Scotland Yard where he had been. He learns that he has been named coexecutor with Mrs. Brandt of Brandt's large estate. A young American visits him and demands a mysterious key.

Sir Humphrey drew a bunch of keys from his pocket.

"Any particular one?" he asked.

"Cheap bluff," the young man scoffed, shaking his head. "Cut that out. We want the key. We were inclined to think that madam had it. We know now that you have. You've got us beaten as to where your hiding place may be, but it doesn't matter. We want the key, and you'll have to produce it."

The Home Secretary was beginning to feel that he liked this young man less and less. The gayety and bonhomie of youth had left his face. Something more menacing and formidable had taken its place. After all, it would have been much wiser to have rung for Carthew when he was on his feet.

"I don't know what you're talking about," he said. "I have no key that belongs to anybody except myself."

"Sir Humphrey," his visitor said, "I came here hoping for a peaceful interview, and that you would have sense enough not to make trouble. You see, the key is not yours. It did not belong personally even to the man who sent it to you. It belongs to us all and we are going to have it."

"You could not tell me what it is the key of, I suppose?" Sir Humphrey inquired. "I am beginning to believe that if you would only be a little more confidential with me——"

"You lawyers are great word-makers," the young man interrupted ruthlessly, "I am a doer, and that is why I was chosen to come and see you tonight. I have no more time to waste. You are supposed to be an honest man—English cabinet minister and all that sort of thing. Give me that key and I'll guarantee that the whole matter shall be dealt with fairly."

Sir Humphrey leaned toward the bell. Instantly he was flung back in his chair, his wrists held in a grip such as he had never before experienced. He would have shouted for help but he was too late. His assailant had his fingers upon his throat. He was no longer such a nice-looking young man. He looked more like a murderer.

"Sir Humphrey, I'm going to choke you if you don't give me that key. I mean it."

Grip Becomes Torture.

The grip upon his throat was becoming a torture. Once more it seemed to Rossiter that he was looking death in the face. He could neither speak nor hear distinctly. The rumble of traffic seemed farther and farther away, the honk of a passing taxicab a faint muffled sound. He made a desperate effort at speech. The young man slackened his grip.

"Are you going to give it to me?" he demanded.

"All that I want to know is—what key you are talking about?" Rossiter gasped.

"You'll be able to guess in a minute," was the brutal reply. "You're in the way, anyhow. We might square things with the key—without it you are going."

The brief respite was over. The fingers were back upon his throat and waves were beginning to flow before his eyes. Then, as once before the telephone had saved him, came another even more dramatic interruption. A brief command was snapped out from only a few feet away.

"Put your hands up. Quick!"

The young man stepped back. He was taken wholly by surprise. From between the curtains behind Sir Humphrey's chair a man in dark clothes and a peaked cap had stepped out, and, although he was considered some gunman himself, Mr. Van Pleyden realized that he had never seen a revolver held by steadier fingers. His hands went up to the limit.

"Keep them there," was the brisk command. "Don't move an inch forward. Now take a pace backward—one pace. Don't let your hands even twitch."

Voice of Authority.

Van Pleyden obeyed. He recognized the voice of authority, and this was no fool who had seen the bending and twitching of his knee, who had seen him getting on the balls of his feet for a spring. Detective Pank thrust his left hand into his pocket and drew out a whistle. He blew it loudly and insistently. In less than 10 seconds there was a thunderous knocking at the outside door and the pealing of the bell. The home secretary sat up in his chair.

"Who's that?" he asked. "My neck is so stiff I can scarcely look around."

"Inspector Pank, in charge of your night shift, Sir Humphrey. Just come on duty. The commissioner's strict orders were that we were to keep out of sight unless we were wanted. Seems to me we're needed pretty badly just now."

There was the sound of the front door being opened, of heavy footsteps in the hall. An eager light shone in Rossiter's eyes. He felt his heart beating quickly. With the arrest of this young man must come the answer to that terrible query which had been making havoc of his life for the last two months. But the young man had not the slightest idea of being arrested. His backward step, taken at Pank's command, had brought him almost into line with Rossiter. He suddenly ducked. In less than a second Sir Humphrey was exactly between his rescuer and his assailant. The latter, stooping low, pushed the easy chair before him, and Pank, leaning forward, met the chair full in his stomach. He gasped for a moment. Still he dared not shoot.

Assailant Escapes.

"Crouch down, sir," he shouted to Sir Humphrey. "Crouch down in the chair!"

It was too late. With one spring Van Pleyden, shielding himself to the last moment with the easy chair, was through the window with a crashing and splintering of glass into the street. Crouching on his knee Pank fired two low shots at the figure crossing the square and watched him stumble. The door of the room had been thrown open. Two plainclothes men were by Pank's side. He waved them on through the debris of the window.

"He'll take the south side of the square for certain," Pank shouted. "He cut his face and hands going through, and I got him in the calf of the leg. If he turns to the left, one of you follow him directly and the other take the next turn and double back. You'll get him between you then."

The men were already out of hearing. Sir Humphrey staggered to his feet.

"Where on earth did you come from, officer?" he gasped.

"I was on duty, watching the house, sir," Pank replied. "As soon as the young gentleman called, I opened this window softly from the outside, and I clambered through when I thought I was wanted. I should have been on hand before but the orders at the Yard were very strict about keeping out of sight."

Fingers Throat.

"God bless my soul!" Rossiter muttered thickly, his fingers still lingering about his throat. "Parkins," he added to the butler, who had hurried in, "whisky and soda for the inspector and for me. * * * And I thought that young man was one of the nicest young fellows I had ever spoken to."

Pank was busy tying up his finger, which had been cut by a piece of the flying glass.

"If he was one of the gang we have news of, sir, you've been lucky," he remarked dryly. "They're killers every one of them. What was he after?"

"A key," Sir Humphrey replied. "The whole wretched business seems to center now around a key. He would not believe that I didn't know anything about it. My safe and my bureau have apparently both been gone through while I was away."

There was a startled exclamation from the background. Parkins had disappeared. Presently he came in again. He was carrying a silver salver and upon it, side by side with the whisky and syphon, was a soiled square envelope of cheap quality. It obviously contained something heavy.

Mysterious Key Produced.

"Sir Humphrey," he said in great agitation, "I'm truly and deeply sorry. What with the excitement of the last few days and your coming back and everything being so upset, things seem to slip out of one's mind. It was early one afternoon some two months ago—it was the day Mr. Brandt was hanged down at Wandsworth—a warder from Wandsworth Prison brought across this envelope and left it for you. I put it on the kitchen dresser and there it has been ever since."

Sir Humphrey opened the envelope. It contained no word or message of any sort, only a medium-sized key, fashioned out of what seemed to be oxidized silver, of strange shape and with an inscription down the shaft. Sir Humphrey and Pank both bent over it.

"Grimmett 1431," Pank spelled out.

Parkins was pouring out the whisky. His hand trembled with agitation. Sir Humphrey patted him on the shoulder.

"Thank God, Parkins, you didn't give me the key before," he said fervently. "I don't know whose it is or to what it belongs, but that young fellow's fingers were so infernally strong I really believe that I would have parted with it."

Chapter XXIII.

Lord Edward Keynsham detached himself from the little group of friends with whom he had entered the dining room of the Carlton Club on the following day, and, with a brief word or two of excuse, crossed the room to the solitary table where Rossiter was lunching. The latter laid down his newspaper and greeted him with an imperturable expression.

"I thought you were abroad, Keynsham," he remarked.

"I returned this morning," was the somewhat weary reply. "I rather wanted to see you. In fact, I want to see you very particularly, so I rang up Whitehall. They told me that you might be lunching here. May I sit down with you?"

"By all means," Rossiter acquiesced. "As a matter of fact, I should be rather glad to have a few words with you myself."

Keynsham drew out the opposite chair, gave an order to the waiter and leaned across the table. He had evidently not recovered from the fatigue of his journey, for there were lines under his eyes, and there was a general air of strain about his appearance and manner.

"Humphrey," he confided, "I am going to make an appeal to you."

"An appeal?" Rossiter repeated gravely. "That sounds quaint."

"You will think so before I have finished," Keynsham went on. "I will start by making a confession. That fellow Brandt who was hung—I knew a great deal more of him than people ever imagined. He was one of my partners in the great enterprise of my life."

"Was that the reason," Sir Humphrey asked severey, "that you became involved in that disgraceful outrage at Norwich—an outrage which might have cost me my reason?"

What Today Means

"Aquarius."

If February 16 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7:15 to 8:15 a. m., from 11 a. m. to 12 noon and from 4 to 5 p. m. The danger periods are from 9 to 10 a. m., from 1 to 2 p. m. and from 6 to 7 p. m.

If you were born on February 16, never allow yourself to contract the habit of becoming penurious. One should exercise moderation in saving, as well as in spending. The spendthrift is just as reprehensible as is the miser. It is a virtue, worthy of cultivation, to learn how to spend wisely, and also to accumulate something for a rainy day. You will find that rural life offers people of your type more contentment and real felicity than does urban. Do not fear matrimony, for marriage is the logical thing for everyone. Your nature craves affection, and you should have companionship. A home is essential to your happiness.

The child born on February 16, as its mentality matures, will give evidence of possessing a vivid imagination. Encourage this trait, but also be careful that the child learns to distinguish the difference between relating imaginary happenings, and the actualities of true occurrences. A proper home environment is very essential for this child's up-rearing.

Do You Know As Much As Your Cat?

She's a knowing cat.

She asks for little—just her meals, a saucer of milk and a place in the sun. She gets plenty of sleep and exercise. She never worries, never frets. What is the result? Such vitality and resistance that we say, "Cats have nine lives."

What does your cat do when she is not well? She eats catnip, if she can find it. She eats grass and certain green plants to which her instinct leads her.

Your cat takes herbs for a tonic.

Did you ever stop to think that Old Mother Nature, who supplies the herbs necessary to your cat's health, has also provided the herbs necessary to your own well-being?

You don't have to hunt for them as the cat does. The herbs you need are skillfully blended and compounded in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, an old fashioned tonic that will help to restore your strength and energy.

Office Women Who Are Pretty Less in Demand

Efficiency Is Placed at Top, Agency Bares Eccentric Requests for Help.

The efficient woman is having her inning again in the business world. The ornamental typist and the personality plus file girl no longer are greatly in demand. Something more is needed now than the ability to put up a "good front."

Efficiency is placed by employment bureau directors at the head of the list of attributes needed by the girl trying to get a job.

"Men are no longer interested in hiring charming dinner companions for their office force—they can't afford it," said an agency director yesterday.

A unanimous request of employers is for girls with initiative. But this request is tempered with the injunction that the applicant not be "too forward." Occasionally an employer requests that the prospective employe have imagination.

Age Less Important.

Personality still is important, but the spectacular kind is not desired. Employers are wary of office prima donnas or secretaries "with souls." They do want women with ability to meet the public and with sufficient poise to be courteous under all conditions. Diplomacy is as much needed in a business office as in an embassy.

The bugbear of age does not loom so ominously as it did in the more frivolous era. However, most employers prefer to take on new office help that is between the ages of 20 and 30. This is because of the greater adaptability of younger employes. But more employers of recent years have awakened to the fact that bull-headedness and bossiness are not so much a matter of years as of temperament.

"The girl of 20 often does not have the poise to make a responsible office employe," said the director of one large employment agency. "I think a business man in need of a good woman employe makes a mistake in setting down any hard and fast age specifications. A woman of 35 often would meet his office needs better than one of 18 and if he were to see the 35-year-old woman he wouldn't know how old she was anyway."

Married Woman's Handicap.

The married woman is handicapped in job-seeking, all the agencies report. Even employers who are not concerned about the ethical phases of the problem often maintain that the married woman has too many outside responsibilities and that these distract from her work.

The college-trained girl has a nine-to-one advantage over the non-college girl in obtaining a job of any consequence. However, there are many employers who want inexperienced and not too highly educated help because it can be obtained for less wages.

While a realism born of the depression characterizes most business men in hiring new employes, many still have eccentric whims.

Recently the telephone in a Washington employment office rang frantically. An angry, and yet imploring voice, came rapidly over the wire.

Size Becomes Important.

"Are," demanded the voice in a tone of bitter sarcasm, with a minor note of patient martyrdom, "are there no little girls in this town? Every one that has been up here is nearly 6 feet tall and weighs about 200 pounds. I must have a small secretary. I have a small office and the girls has to fit in here. I can't have her taking up all my space!"

"And that," said the head of the employment office, "is only one of the peculiar requests that we get. One man wanted a girl with long hair. He said that he was tired of bobbed-hair secretaries who combed their hair all the time. He added a few choice remarks about girls who thought offices were beauty parlors and hung up. We found the long-haired girl.

"Then there was the personality eccentric who insisted on having a blonde. He said he had a brunette working for him already, and that he thought a blonde and brunette would work together more harmoniously than two of a kind."

Historic Kenmore Crowds Increasing

Students Throng to Shrine at Fredericksburg to Learn History.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 15 (Spl.).—January admissions to Kenmore, colonial home of Col. Fielding H. and Betty Washington Lewis, surpassed the record for 1933 and 1932 and were equal to the highest figures of predepression years, it has been announced by Mrs. H. H. Smith, National secretary of the Kenmore Association.

January being "student month" at Kenmore, all students from schools or colleges are admitted free of charge, partly accounting for the increase. Thousands of students have come by bus from distant parts of Virginia as well as neighboring States and the District of Columbia to take advantage of Kenmore's offer of "history study by first-hand observation."

The general admission also showed an increase, and Kenmore authorities have reported that the warm spring weather of much of last month attracted many visitors from Washington. The Kenmore Association is forming plans for Kenmore's annual celebration of the birthday of George Washington, who periodically visited his sister there while living at Mount Vernon.

New Deal Brings Prosperity to Renter of Formal Garb for Men.

By Mildred Reed Bundy.

Up a long flight of worn steps I found a man as enthusiastic about the New Deal as ever a man could be. This is why: He rents coat tails. He is an Outfitter.

"The Roosevelts are a godsend to me," the Outfitter said. "I've rented formal suits for eight years and never have known business to be so good."

"What puzzles me is the self-consciousness men have about such things," the Outfitter continued. "They tell me with great embarrassment their reasons for having to rent a suit, reasons I have a hard time believing. For instance, they say:

Or:

"'That tailor of mine couldn't finish my soup and fish and I gave him the order weeks ago.'"

"Or again they blame their very evident lack of evening clothes on their wives' forgetfulness to pack the good old tails."

The more important the customer seems to be, the more embarrassed and apologetic he is about needing to fill deficiencies in his wardrobe, according to the Outfitter. Congress members will make explanations more quickly than will men lower down in the official ladder. And all the time, the Outfitter insists, no explanation or apologies are due. He who rents formal clothes is economical, for the cost of being correctly dressed for a half dozen occasions is only a small part of what owning such clothes would cost.

If the Outfitter would write on the subject, "How to Dress Correctly on a Rental Budget," he would undoubtedly offer valuable help on men's sartorial problems. Figures on which to base such a budget are rental quotations of $3 for morning suits, for Prince Alberts, for tuxedos and for full dress suits. Should the seeker for formal clothes be the possessor of a coat or trousers which may be matched to the missing part in the Outfitter's shop, then the cost of looking right is cut in half. And that well-groomed look, which really is possible in rented garments, may be finished off with a "topper" for only a dollar an evening.

Three pounds of kale proved almost too much of that healthful vegetable for young Mrs. James Cummings, formerly Marianne Harrison, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Pat Harrison. The recent bride is chief cook in the tiny kitchen of her home in Chevy Chase. Nothing in her newly-wed experience had taught Mrs. Cummings how much kale was sufficient for two persons. Nearly all the shining small pans were brought into use for cooking the fluffy green leaves, and every dinner menu in the Cummings family for several days has included kale.

A $200 purchase in a local shop would not have been burdensome to the customer had she chosen to carry it home, rather than to have it delivered. It consisted of several exquisite night dresses of silk, chiffon and lace. The irresistible wisps of garments were unusual in that they had been designed in the period manner. A demure blue one, for instance, is labeled "Jane Seymour," while a lacy, puff-sleeved youthful model is "Catharine Aragon." The vogue for pajamas among women has aroused night dress manufacturers to active competition.

Sociologist Reports Marriage Increase

Ames, Iowa, Feb. 15 (AP).—Prof. George H. Von Tungeln, of the Iowa State College sociology department, today said young people were marrying earlier and in increasing numbers and, "though one marriage in six breaks up, divorces are decreasing."

Between 1920 and 1930, Prof. Von Tungeln said, there was an increase of 23 per cent in the total number of families in the United States.

"The family habitat, once both shop and home, now is a place where we eat sometimes, sleep a little and hang our spare clothes," he said. "When children were of economic worth there were more of them. Now a child is an economic liability. He costs more than the home itself."

Amy Mollison Says Women Should Fly Only for Love of It

By Virginia Lee Warren.

Women should stay out of aviation unless they go into it for the sheer love of flying, believes Amy Mollison, famous British aviatrix.

Mrs. Mollison, her skin burned to a coppery shade by several months of Florida sunshine, declared yesterday morning in her suite at the Mayflower that she had no hope of women ever earning their living in aviation.

"Piloting a commercial plane is like sailing a big ship or running a locomotive," explained the 24-year-old aviatrix, holder of the London-to-Cape Town record. "I've never heard of a woman ship captain or a woman locomotive engineer and I don't believe I'll ever hear of a woman flying a transport plane on a regular schedule."

It isn't that the women lack endurance, according to Mrs. Mollison. She is sure they have just as much as the men.

"But they will never be able to convince aviation officials that they are capable of piloting transport planes," she said. Wide-set blue eyes looked out candidly from between unbelievably long lashes. In her dark brown sports suit, flat-heeled shoes, and with brown hair brushed back in soft waves, she looked more like a wholesome "collegienne" than a daring young woman who thinks nothing of flying alone over half the face of the globe.

Mrs. Mollison had come to Washington to lecture before the National Geographic Society on her solo flights from England to Australia, made six years ago. As soon as that engagement has been filled she will sail for England, where she will join her husband, Capt. James Mollison, who made the first east-to-west solo flight across the Atlantic.

"I'm homesick," said the noted flier. "I've been away from England for seven months. That's a long time." Her speech was clipped; her accent typically British. "No, I haven't any particular plans. The important thing to me now is to get home—though home is only a London hotel suite."

Planes Gave Inspiration.

It was after she had received a degree in economics from a northern England university and was working in a lawyer's office in London that Mrs. Mollison, then Amy Johnson, saw an airplane for the first time. She was on her way to a week-end in the country when she heard the noise of motors above her.

"The moment I saw those ships I knew I must fly!" There was an excited note in her voice. "I followed them to the landing field. When I saw them close up I wanted to climb right in one. Instead I went to an aeronautics club and began taking flying lessons."

Mrs. Mollison's parents in Yorkshire did not share her enthusiasm for aviation. The result was that Amy Johnson remained away from home a year, learning to pilot a plane.

"My family finally became reconciled to my flying," she said, "and when I had almost given up ever getting enough money for my Australian flight, my father said he would give me half the amount I needed if I could raise the other half. He admitted afterward that he thought he was safe in making that offer. But soon after he made it I managed to get the rest of the money to fly solo to Australia."

Prefers to Be at Controls.

Since that record-breaking flight, Mrs. Mollison has flown the Atlantic with her husband, alternating with him at the controls of the plane. She admitted, however, that she was nervous while Capt. Mollison was piloting.

"He's really a better flier than I am, but I feel a little more comfortable when I am at the controls." She smiled slowly. "I suppose it's just the same with driving a car. No matter how well another person drives, you always want to hold the wheel yourself."

If she were to make another long flight she would rather go solo, Mrs. Mollison believes.

"Of course, if I were to be plopped down on a desert island or on an iceberg, it would be nice to mitted. "Otherwise, I would rather fly alone."

Rosika Schwimmer Will Fight No More

Famous Pacifist Sees War Inevitable in Europe.

New York, Feb. 15 (AP).—Mme. Rosika Schwimmer, whose pacifist labors have made her, at 57, a woman without a country, says she believes the flare-up in Austria may be the spark that touches off war in Europe.

But when war comes she will do no more fighting in the cause of peace, will work for no more peace conferences, will persuade no millionaires to charter peace ships.

"I would just sit down and look, and wouldn't move a finger," she said.

"The present situation in Austria must be blamed on the rest of the world.

"No other country was as badly off as Austria at the close of the World War, and no other country had such wonderful spirit and kept its temper—and not in a Pollyanna way, either. In her worst days, Austria was hospitable to political refugees from both the 'red' and 'white' regimes in Hungary."

Mme. Schwimmer, who describes herself as an old-fashioned liberal, was one of those refugees.

"It has been obvious for over a year that Austria was going to be gobbled up by either Hitler or Mussolini. The great powers should have made it very clear that they would not tolerate either of these dictators crushing that lovely country. America could have led the way, by the use of the Stimson doctrine. Instead, the world petted Chancellor Dollfuss, who is no better than Hitler.

Women of Sixth-Century Korea Took Vanity Cases to Grave

They Also Carried Mirrors There on Theory They Thus Could Light Tomb, Helen Fernald Archeologist Who Explored Ancient Mounds, Reveals.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

While the modern woman resorts to her mirror for a well-known purpose, the Korean woman of the sixth century had another important use for hers. She requested that several mirrors be placed in her tomb because she believed that they gave forth light in the darkness of the grave.

Evidence of this was discovered by Miss Helen Farnald, noted archeologist, in company with a group of other scientists who in the last few years explored several Korean tombs of the sixth century. Miss Fernald recently visited here as guest lecturer of the Archaeological Society of Washington.

"But even though the ancient Korean woman did not use her mirror exclusively for viewing her own reflection," said Miss Fernald, "she did have one thing in common with her modern sisters—she owned a vanity case."

Furthermore, this object must have been very dear to her, for it was buried with her, too. One vanity case, recently discovered in a tomb, contained—instead of powder and rouge—tweezers, an ear spoon and a punch! Other possessions have been unearthed, too. Jeweled belts have been found, as well as huge earrings, intricately carved necklaces and magnificent crowns that give us a good idea of what the fashionable Korean queens wore in the way of ornament 14 centuries ago.

Amazing Treasure Found.

"The objects discovered in excavating the Golden Crown tomb in Keishu were particularly interesting," stated Miss Fernald. "In fact, archeological attention has been fixed upon Keishu since 1921, when a farmer, clearing a mound of stones and clay, came upon an amazing treasure. This mound proved to be the grave of a king and queen, who had been buried with all their regalia."

"The most beautiful object of all was a high golden crown," continued Miss Fernald. "It was formed of three tall conventional trees rising from a band of gold. The latter encircled an openwork, peaked cap terminating in two winglike flaps of intricate lacy design. There was, also, a belt made of golden plaques, sewed on some textile material of which nothing remained. And there were heavy, elaborate earrings, bracelets, rings, and five golden bowls. In fact, the solid gold objects weighed more than 70 pounds, while the thousands of blue glass beads and jade magatama were much heavier."

Since it is surprising to find articles of glass in Korea, it is supposed that those in this tomb must have been brought over the Central Asian caravan routes from the Roman world.

Thousands Still Untouched.

"Only 8 or 10 of about 1,000 mounds around Keishu have even been touched by explorers," Miss Fernald said. "Most of the tomb mounds are still intact, for robbery would have been difficult. Beneath the sod there is a thick layer of clay. Under this the interior of the mound is one great pile of stone, in the middle of which is a chamber of wood containing a wooden coffin. Efforts of any robber to penetrate such a mass of loose stones would have been detected long before he had had any chance to get to the tomb chamber. For the same reason excavating must be done with great care lest the contents of the graves be broken.

"These excavations, which are being carried on by the Japanese Archaeological Society, are revealing much about the hitherto unknown daily life of the early rulers. Then, too, amazing wealth is being uncovered. Furthermore, these findings serve to establish the early connection between Korea and Japan, as well as between Korea and China. Also, they provide evidence of the Korean inheritance from Syria, from ancient Sumeria and later Persia."

Miss Fernald attended many excavations as guest of the Japanese Archaeological Society, which now has charge of all such explorations in Korea.

A graduate of Mount Holyoke and formerly a pupil of the Art Students' League in New York, Miss Fernald later became artist and technician in the department of zoology in Columbia University. Then she taught for a time in Bryn Mawr, leaving that college to accept the position as curator of the Far Eastern division in the University Museum of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Carbery Began Career With Tea Room at Reno, Nev.

Dinner Party Conversation Inspired Her Interest in Foods and She Made Field Study of Subject Among Inns of France; Offers Recipe for Foie de Veau d'Italienne.

From the beginning of civilization, it has been a woman's duty to cook. To some women now, the kitchen is a drab place of drudgery, the dining room a tiresome setting for finicky appetites. But one woman made of cooking first a hobby, then a profession. To her it is an art and a source of ever increasing interest.

By Susan Mills.

A blue-eyed woman in an embroidered French smock stepped forward and extended a friendly hand.

"I'm Mrs. Carbery," she said. "Come in, won't you, and get warm. You picked a bad day to come 'way out here."

She turned to one of the waitresses, a girl looking as if she had stepped from a story book, her bright costume blending with the delightful atmosphere of Normandy Farms.

"Bring some coffee, Maud."

Mrs. Carbery sat down on the sofa in front of the huge fireplace, pushed the mass of curls from her forehead and said:

"In the first place, I have never studied cooking in a school. My scholastic education is limited to journalism and social service. When I started experimenting with foods about seven or eight years ago, I knew nothing at all, and everything I have learned has been through experimentation and watching other cooks.

Interest in Cooking Born.

"I remember how my interest in foods began. I was at a dinner party and the conversation had drifted into the subject of foods. I remarked that it seemed odd that food advertisers didn't hook up their products with recipes. In effect, the housewife calls up her grocer and orders dinner No. 7, which would be sent out along with the recipes and the menu.

"The more I thought about this advertising scheme, the more interested I became in foods. I turned my kitchen over into a laboratory, planning and preparing well-balanced and tasteful foods.

"If I do say so, I think I have a keen sense of taste. It is a useful thing to have.

"So I fussed around on my idea for about three years. Then I planned to open a tea room in Reno, Nev. I started with $5 in my bank account. I painted inside and out, the house in which I had my tea room. Some of the university professors' wives helped me to make and hang curtains.

Goes to France to Study.

"Then the blow came. I had hired a professional cook, the best in Reno, to work for me for what I considered a fabulous price. The day before I was to open the shop, she called up and demanded more money. I told her that if she felt that way she needn't come at all. She asked me: 'Well, what will you do—I am the only cook in Reno?' I said I had a very good cook I could use—myself. So that was that.

"The opening the next day was to be a luncheon for the townspeople. I stayed up all night and cooked the luncheon over three times until I had what I wanted.

"As a matter of fact, the luncheon was such a success that Reno took quite a bit of civic pride in the 'corner cupboard.' Any number of noted people who came there for divorces would come into my kitchen and mess around, give me their ideas on cooking, and comment on this and that. It was great fun—I never had such a lot of fun in all my life."

Mrs. Carbery conducted the Reno tea room about three years. She then went abroad to study French cooking. In Normandy, she went from inn to inn watching the chefs at work and making mental notes about what they did.

Unspoiled Small Taverns.

"At first the innkeepers looked at me with a little suspicion," she related. "Why did I want to go into their kitchens? But since I seemed harmless, I finally gained admission.

"I found the small inns that were not frequented by tourists served the best food. They were typically French, and not colored with attempts to please American tastes.

"The cooks at these inns were people after my own heart. They never made a dish the same way twice, always seasoned and combined by instinct and chance, and always with amazingly good results.

"I never can stick to a recipe. I read it, try it, and get a new idea. After all, there's no fun in doing a thing by a book. I like to experiment, and invent. And it is true, too, that it isn't the recipe that counts; it is the attitude and methods of the cook. If a cook is seeking to find new ideas and pleasing flavors, the cooking will be good. It is a reflection of the maker's enthusiasm.

"At the Normandy inns, I learned the importance of sauces. They are vital as complements to meat or fish. Also, I overcame the idea I had that soups were superfluous and rather an irritation, since they took away the appetite.

Pleasing Eye and Palate.

"I discovered the fact that a meal should begin well, and the start should be pleasing to the eye as well as the appetite. The French understand that, and their soups are very pretty to look at as well as delicious to taste.

"Once I had an American chef here at Normandy Farms. I couldn't keep him long because he was so reticent. I told him once that I thought a little orange peel would improve one of our soups. He raved, 'But I could never put orange peel into soups!' So what could I do? Orange peel will improve some soups. I'd rather do the cooking myself than argue about it.

"I superintend most of the cooking here now. The girl I have with me now was entirely untrained when she came to me and I have taught her my methods. She is quick to learn, and once when I was taken suddenly ill, she volunteered to do the cooking and did it remarkably well. We are very particular in the matter of vegetable cooking. Our vegetables are gathered fresh from our garden or hot house and cooked in small quantities.

"I love garlic—I couldn't live without garlic!" Mrs. Carbery laughed merrily. "I put it in everything but the desserts and I'm going to try it in those some day. I have it hanging from the rafters." She pointed to a string of garlic hanging above her. "When we need it in the kitchen we come in here and pull it off.

Calls Garlic Essential.

"It is true that the methods in which garlic is used are of the utmost importance. Sometimes it is necessary to fry it in olive oil until it is almost black and use it that way. Sometimes it is necessary to use only the smallest drop of juice.

"I like old, unusual recipes, and old, unusual things. Those copper pans"—she pointed to the array of them hanging around the stone fireplace—"are all more than 200 years old. It intrigues me to use pots that have held all the delicious foods.

"Here is a recipe—one of my own. I am gathering some of my original recipes for a book.

FOIE DE VEAU D'ITALIENNE.

Cut calves liver about an inch thick. Put some olives or soy bean oil in a casserole, or iron or copper. Lay in the liver, sprinkle with salt and pepper, a little sage, and a little rose-marie. Then add finely sliced garlic, onion, parsley or celery leaves all finely chopped, and thinly sliced fresh mushrooms. Lay another slice of liver on this and repeat process. Pour over all some sherry, cover with paper and a tight lid. Bake in moderate oven for two hours. The dish should be moist, and if it is found to be too dry, add a little more sherry during the cooking and return to oven.

Tomorrow the Woman's Page will present the eleventh of the series of interviews with Washington's best cooks.

State to Carry Main Federal CWA Projects

Malaria, Typhus Control and Sanitation Will Continue.

Richmond, Feb. 15 (AP).—Ordered to discontinue by midnight all Civil Works projects designated as "Federal," William A. Smith, State CWA director, announced plans for the taking over of the more important of these in Virginia as State projects.

The principal projects affected are the rural sanitation work in cooperation with the State Department of Health, the mosquito control and malaria eradication projects in the Tidewater region, and the typhus fever control under way in the Hampton Roads area.

Mr. Smith said these projects would be transferred to the State quotas as rapidly as possible.

Statistical projects under the Federal quota will be exempt from the discontinuation order, and Mr. Smith said that the historical building survey would be interpreted as statistical.

About 1,500 persons are now employed on mosquito-control projects in the Tidewater region and on community sanitation work throughout the State. He was not prepared to say how many would be suspended as a result of the new order.

Work Valued at $170,000.

Danville, Va., Feb. 15 (Spl.).—Total value of CWA projects now in progress in Danville was given yesterday by Howard Hylton, local administrator, as $170,000, excluding a Federal project of $15,000.

Bristol Plans New Projects.

Bristol, Va., Feb. 15 (Spl.).—Approval of projects that would improve streets, beautify the city, better the airport and build an addition to the high school is sought for the second phase of the CWA in Bristol, Va., by Administrator Fox Drinkard.

The street improvement project asks $44,813 for grading, draining, surfacing and some curb and gutter construction on numerous streets. If granted, $9,278.15 would be spent in improving the airport. Four thousand five hundred dollars is asked to plant shrubs and trees, and beautify the city.

Roanoke Seeks $27,000.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 15 (Spl.). The local Social Service Bureau has on file at Richmond applications totaling $27,099.75 with the CWA, intended to give work to 112 persons.

The projects call for the employment of two nurses for tuberculosis prevention work in cooperation with the Instructive Visiting Nurse Association, 27 persons in copying old land books, making personal property files and preparation of a list of all persons liable for taxation, three assistants at the public library and one at the Melrose branch, 57 persons in the city recreational department, a nurse at the transient bureau, and several stenographers at the Social Service Bureau.

Airport Plan Defeated.

Lexington, Va., Feb. 15 (Spl.). The Rockbridge County supervisors and the Lexington council, in joint session, rejected the CWA project for an airport on the E. N. Bare farm, three miles south of here.

Burned-Out Pupils Have Brief Holiday

Berkeley Classes to Be Held in House.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 15 (Spl.).—The 55 pupils, who last Friday were forced to flee from their burning Smith schoolhouse on the edge of this city, will not have a long vacation.

The school board last night arranged temporary class accommodations in a home near the site of the old school, which was destroyed. Ten students will be put in another school.

-:- The Federal Diary -:-

By Morgan Baker
(Trade-mark Applied For)

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

THIS is Massachusetts day in the Federal Diary's Parade of the States. Sons of the Bay State hold many high positions among the New Dealers. Some amazing figures on the greatness of this State in the industrial world have been found.

BAKER.

Another of those alert, progressive Western States will be next in Federal Diary's Parade. Utah is well represented in Washington, as Diary readers will see Monday.

We are anxious to learn of new arrivals from all sections of the country and their activities in Washington. The Diary invites all Federal employes to send in items about fellow workers from their home State.

To Massachusetts.

To her the Nation owes a debt
It never can repay—
Her fortitude, example set,
Her charting of the way
To guide this Nation ever on
And hold it to the course,
Our bark she pointed for the dawn—
Of liberty she's source.

Today her well-kept shallow fields
Where trod ancestral folk
No longer offer scanty yields
For garnering by yolk.
Now colleges, homes, great cities, mills
Each corner penetrate.
At sight of which each native thrills
With pride for his "Bay State."

Per capita wealth of Massachusetts is estimated at $3,562.

The 1930 census returned the population as 3,831,426 urban and 418,188 rural.

Massachusetts ranked fourteenth in value of domestic exports in 1932 with $32,255,535.

Massachusetts is the leading fisheries State of New England.

Left, Francis B. Sayre, of Cambridge, is Assistant Secretary of State. He is a son-in-law of the late President Wilson and an educator and authority on international law. Right, Dr. Charles Greely Abbot, of Boston, is secretary of the Smithsonian Institution. He is one of America's leading scientists and has written numerous books on astrophysical subjects.

The catch in 1930 was 442,474,000 pounds, valued at $16,289,100. Boston is the greatest fishing port in the country.

No State is further advanced in primary and higher educational facilities than Massachusetts. However, owing to the recent influx of industrial foreigners, the percentage of illiteracy is not low at 3.5. Native whites show 0.4 per cent illiteracy. Annual expenditures for public schools exceed $85,971,100.

The capitalization of industries in Massachusetts, which include all lines of manufacturing, is estimated at more than $3,000,000,000.

Boston is one of the only three American cities with rapid transit subway systems.

Two native sons of Massachusetts have been President of the United States, John Adams and John Quincy Adams. Calvin Coolidge, although a native of Vermont, was Governor of Massachusetts when elected Vice President.

Boston is the fourth port in America with a total of 11,786,836 cargo tons (2,240 pounds) of imports and exports.

MASSACHUSETTS, one of the original 13 States, has an area of 8,040 square miles, with a population (1930) of 4,253,646. It is second in rank in density of population, being 514.6 to the square mile. It is not an agricultural State, but preeminently adapted to commercial and manufacturing purposes by reason of its abundant water supply and transportation facilities.

Lowell is noted for its large carpet mills, Worcester has the largest steel wire works in the world; Holyoke ranks first in paper manufacturing, North Easton in shovel manufacturing, and Lynn in electrical instruments.

WILLIAM PHILLIPS, of Boston, Undersecretary of State, is a career diplomat, having served in London, Peking and The Hague. He holds an A. M. from Harvard and an LL. D. from Queens College, Canada.

Lawrence is famous for its cotton and woolen mills, Haverhill and Lynn for shoe factories, Dalton for note paper, Taunton for cotton and silverware, Wakefield for rattan, Waltham for watches and Fitchburg for tool manufacturing.

The surface of the State is rugged and, although not generally adapted to agriculture, the Connecticut and Housatonic Valleys are fertile and produce highly specialized crops. In common with all New England, the State is a great summer resort. The beaches of North and South Boston and the Berkshire Hills are the Mecca of vacationists from all parts of the country.

The history of Massachusetts begins with the landing of the Pilgrims in the Mayflower at Plymouth in 1620. The hardships endured by this company in search of religious freedom and the struggle for existence is one of the epics of early American history. In 1628 another colony was established at Salem, and both were united under one government, with what is now the State of Maine under a royal charter for the Massachusetts Bay Colony. There commenced a new development of popular government.

The colony in pre-Revolutionary days was the center of republic-making in the North and perhaps the foremost of the colonies in this respect, certainly in the matter of action against oppression. The Boston Tea Party, which signaled the revolt against taxation without representation, took place on the Boston water front. Later followed the battles of Lexington and Concord, the battle of Bunker Hill, and the assuming of command of the Continental forces by Gen. Washington at Cambridge. This formally ushered in the fight for freedom.

One of the chief objectives of the early colonists was the education of both young and old. This has resulted in the early foundation and development of educational facilities. The early foundation of a public school system and the building of institutions of higher learning has put Massachusetts in the forefront in this respect. Among its noted colleges are Harvard, Amherst, Boston University, Williams, Holy Cross, Wellesley, Mount Holyoke, Smith and Radcliff.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
WITHOUT CALOMEL
And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul. skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. © 1933 C. M. Co.

U. S. Begins Drive on Rum Candy Here

Peril to Children Seen in Latest Type of Bootlegging.

The "rum drop bootlegger" has appeared in Washington and many parts of the country, W. G. Campbell, chief of the Federal Food and Drug Administration, revealed yesterday, in announcing that during the past month his agents here have seized approximately 300 pounds of candy filled with whisky, wine, benedictine, brandy and cognac.

The confections have been on sale both in retail and wholesale establishments, Campbell said.

These candies contain from 8 to 16 per cent alcohol, tests performed in the administration's laboratories reveal. Six of the types tested, in many cases, have the "kick" of a "short drink," while a dozen have an alcoholic content the equivalent of a "long, tall one."

Sales on Increase.

Despite an active drive on merchants who sell them, demand for the candies seems to be on the increase.

Seizures here form only a part of the total confiscated in large cities elsewhere in the Nation.

According to Campbell, most of the rum-filled candies purportedly are manufactured in France, their circular tin boxes bearing the label of a Paris confectioner. Many consignments have been confiscated in ports over the country.

Many of the alleged French candies are frauds, Campbell asserted. They actually are manufactured in the United States, and labeled falsely.

The accomplished "toper" would have difficulty getting any lasting effect from the confections, tests demonstrate, but an alcoholic appetite might be created in children who find them easy to buy at the corner store.

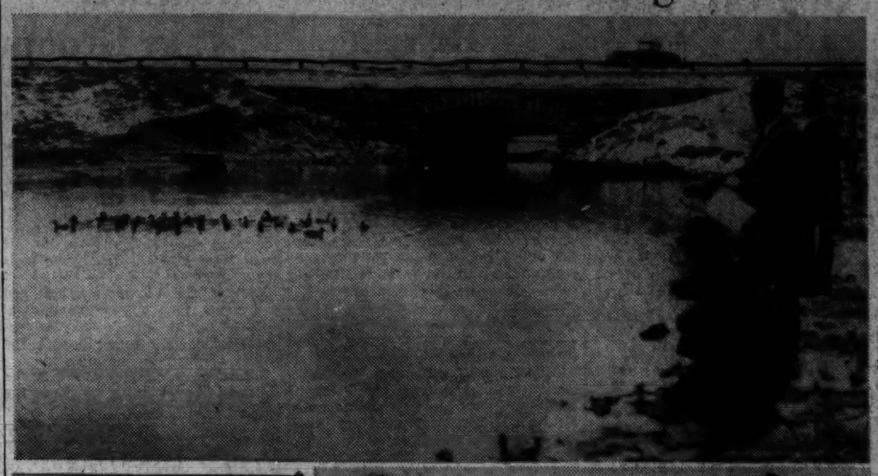
Draws W. C. T. U. Fire.

The manufacture of the candies violates one of the most stringent clauses of the pure food and drug law, which prohibits the use of alcohol or alcoholic substances in candies. This requirement has in no way been modified by the repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

Recently an employe of the administration visited Baltimore and bought several of the candies advertised in shop windows.

The District W. C. T. U. will cooperate in every way to stamp out the trade in the "candy drinks," its president, Mrs. Jennie Bailey Wadleigh, announced.

Duck Feeders Confiscate Baiting Device



Post Staff Photos.

Auto Owners Get a Break On Income Tax

Deductions Are Allowed for Numerous Levies They Must Pay.

(Associated Press.)

The Nation's automobile owners, who in recent years have complained of being taxed "right and left," have a chance for some "offset" on these levies when it comes to payment on their Federal income taxes.

The motor car owner, in making out his income tax return, may deduct from his gross income all sums paid during 1933 in the form of registration fees, driver's license fees, State personal property and municipal taxes on his car.

If the car is used exclusively for business purposes, he can deduct the entire cost of gasoline, oil, repairs, rent for garage and other necessary expenses connected with operation and upkeep. Depreciation also is deductible.

If the car is used partly for business and partly for pleasure, the proportionate amount of maintenance and depreciation may be deducted, based on the extent of its use for the former purpose. The loss from damage to a passenger automobile while being used for business is deductible. There must be an actual loss since it is not deductible if compensated by insurance or otherwise.

The State gasoline tax may be deducted in all cases where it is a "consumer's tax" but not where it is specifically enacted as a "distributor's tax."

Interest on money borrowed for the purchase of a motor car, either for business or for pleasure, is deductible. So is the amount paid for insurance on motor vehicles used for business purposes.

Surviving Mr. Humphrey are his widow and a sister, Miss Edna Humphrey, of Crawfordsville, Ind. Mr. Humphrey was born at Alamo, Ind.

Detroit, Feb. 15 (AP).—Joseph P. (Red) O'Riordan, convicted last month of kidnaping Abe Fein here in 1927, was sentenced today to serve from 15 to 45 years in the Marquette prison.

O'Riordan, described by police as last member, captured or killed, of a kidnaping ring that operated here until 1930, was arrested last fall in California.

Senate Gives Miss Bentley Confirmation

Judgeship Nomination Is Not Debated After Report Is Given.

Appointment of Miss Fay L. Bentley as judge of the Juvenile Court of the District was confirmed by the Senate yesterday without debate.

Miss Bentley will succeed Judge Kathryn Sellers, who has continued in office pending Senate confirmation of her successor. Miss Bentley was given a recess appointment by the President last fall, but made no effort to take office when Judge Sellers pointed out the provision of the law continuing a judge's term until a successor had been confirmed.

Approval of Miss Bentley's appointment was made on the unanimous recommendation of a judiciary sub-committee composed of Senators William H. King, Utah, chairman, and M. M. Logan, Kentucky (Democrats), and George W. Norris (Republican), Nebraska.

Recommendation of the sub-committee was made after it had heard Miss Bentley both warmly approved and opposed.

U. S. Workers' "Outside" Jobs Ban Is Slated

Bill in House Would Prohibit Additional Employment.

A joint resolution designed to prohibit Government employes from holding outside jobs was introduced in the House late yesterday by Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), West Virginia, and will be pressed for immediate action.

Randolph said that the resolution has the backing of the leading representatives of the Government employes and of many members of Congress. It would result, he said, in "raising the dignity" of Government employes.

The West Virginian said he had evidence that many Government employes who are receiving a livable wage from the United States spend their spare hours competing unfairly with employes in private industry by working for wages which full-time workers could not live on.

Serve as Janitors.

He read a letter which reported instances of employes in the postal section of the War Department who serve as janitors in apartment houses as well.

Many other Government employes, he said, serve as grocery-store clerks, sell insurance, drive taxicabs and the like in their off hours.

Randolph explained that he is an advocate of full restoration of the 15 per cent pay cut and that he believed a resolution such as he introduced would help this cause. He said that he intends to ask this morning for indorsement of the resolution at an executive session of the House Labor Committee.

Bars All Services.

The text of the resolution follows:

"That after six months from the date of enactment of this joint resolution no officer or employe in the executive branch of the Government shall engage in any profession or occupaiton for compensation or profit other than as such officer or employe."

Women of the Moose Meet Here Next Week

Conference on chapter development of the Women of the Moose will be held here February 21, 22 and 24 in connection with the mid-winter meeting of the supreme council of the Loyal Order of the Moose. Miss Katherine Smith, grand recorder of the Women of the Moose, arrived yesterday to supervise arrangements for the conference.

"We expect to have a large attendance of women, particularly from the East," said Miss Smith. "There will be large delegations from Pennsylvania, New England and as far west as Illinois."

Postoffice Files Once Contained In Three Rented Rooms Here

Search of Ancient Records Bares "Career Story" of Department.

Search of old records at the Postoffice Department in connection with that agency's preparations to move to its new quarters in March, yesterday revealed a story that might be entitled, "From Rented Rooms to Palace."

It is the department's "career story," with its beginning when Washington became the National Capital.

Records in the department's archives include official volumes that were brought here from Philadelphia when the seat of government was shifted.

Volumes in Three Rooms.

Upon their arrival in Washington as the eighteenth century was drawing to a close, these volumes dealing mainly with the financial side of postoffice activities, were placed in three rooms of a building at Ninth and E streets northwest. Those rooms, rented from the owner of the building, were the department's first quarters in Washington.

Soon thereafter, a speculator, who overestimated the speed with which Washington would grow after becoming the National Capital, began construction of a hotel on the north side of E street, between Seventh and Ninth. His funds were exhausted before the structure was completed. Then the half-finished building was offered as a lottery prize. The lucky ticket was held by two orphans, who had received it as a present.

After remaining in its half-finished state for almost 10 years, the building finally was completed. Following its use during a short period as a theater, it was purchased by the Government and the Postoffice Department moved into it.

The department had its quarters there until December 15, 1836, the old archives show. On that day, the building was destroyed by fire and the department was forced to rent temporary quarters in a private building nearby, pending erection of the southern portion of the structure which now occupies the entire square on a portion of which the destroyed building had stood.

The department occupied that structure until 1899, almost 100 years to a day after it had moved here from Philadelphia. At that time, the building which it now occupies was completed and available for the department's use.

903 Offices to 47,000.

The department will move again within a month, this time to establish itself in a building containing floor space far greater than that required by all branches of the Government combined in the early days of Washington.

The old files, incidentally, show the mail service was handled by 903 postoffices during the first year after the department's headquarters were brought to Washington. The corresponding total now is approximately 47,000.

D. C. Relief Methods Due For Shake-up

65 New Case Workers Will Be Added to Speed Aid.

Allen Cites Waste After Survey; $200,000 More Granted.

Because of waste and inefficiency in the present method of relief administration in the District, Commissioner George E. Allen last night said that he plans a complete shake-up of relief methods here.

Allen's announcement followed a tour of local relief stations which he made with Arch Mandel, field worker of the Federal Relief Administration; and Leroy Halbert, District relief administrator.

Most important of the changes Allen outlined wil be the hiring of approximately 65 new case workers which means that each case worker will have about 100 cases to handle and report on.

The District Commissioners were notified yesterday by the Federal releif administrator, Harry L. Hopkins, that a grant of $200,000 to cover relief needs in Washington during February had been made.

D. C. Fund Exhausted.

The District's own appropriation of $1,300,000 for unemployment relief is exhausted, and consequently the grant was made without reference to the spending of District funds. Former FERA grants to the District were made on a basis of one-third of expenditures from District funds.

Commissioner Allen's promised shakeup does not mean any change in the relief personnel. He merely plans to put the relief spending on a more satisfactory and business-like basis.

Although the hiring of more case workers will increase the overhead of relief, Allen said that he believed that such a plan would save more than its cost in the more efficient distribution of funds.

Waste Is Cited.

At present he said thousands of dollars are trickling away because the force of case workers is not adequate to investigate applications for relief properly and completely.

With the augmented force of workers, he believes, home conditions of all applicants can be investigated and each case worker will be at all times aware of the actual need existing in the cases under his jurisdiction.

At present, he said, applicants for relief are forced to wait for hours in crowded and inadequate buildings before they are given an opportunity to get the needed relief.

The organization he has planned, Commissioner Allen said, would function in the same manner as the sales department of a business organization, with the case workers directly responsible for the funds expended to the members of their list of needy.

Contralto-Harp Recital At Congressional Club

Eva Whitford Lovette, mezzo-contralto, and Edythe Marion Brosius, harpist, will give a joint program for the members of the Congressional Club at the tea in the clubhouse this afternoon.

Mrs. Brosius will present three groups on the harp, including Handel's "Ombra mai fu," a Chopin "Prelude," and "Arabesque" by Debussy and a "Minuet" by Massenet.

Cannon Wants Trial Advanced

Requests Change to Let Him Attend Church Convention.

Because he plans to attend a church convention during April, Bishop James Cannon, jr., yesterday asked the District Supreme Court to advance his trial on charges of conspiring to violate the corrupt practices act to March 15.

Attorneys representing the Government indicated they would oppose granting the motion for the reason that it would be difficult to get the Government's case ready by that date.

The bishop is under indictment with his ald, Miss Ada L. Burroughs, for allegedly failing to report contributions made by E. C. Jameson, New York capitalist, to the Virginia anti-Smith committee during the Presidential campaign in which Alfred E. Smith was a candidate. The United States Supreme Court recently dismissed six of the eight counts in the indictment. The remainder charge that Cannon and Miss Burroughs, who was treasurer of the committee, conspired together to violate the act.

8 Liquor Jobs Go for Present To Policemen

Patronage Move Suspected Here on Heels of Civil Service Pledge.

Action by the District Commissioners yesterday indicated that the eight jobs as inspectors of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board would be filled with patronage applicants, despite the definite statement of last week that they would be filled from Civil Service lists.

The Commissioners yesterday asked Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, to name eight policemen to serve as inspectors until the civilian inspectors are finally appointed.

Under an agreement made last week between the Commissioners and the Civil Service Commission, all of the posts on the board except that of secretary and confidential clerk were to be filled with Civil Service eligibles.

When asked if the decision to name policemen as temporary inspectors meant the abandonment of the agreement, both Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and Commissioner George E. Allen said they had "nothing to say."

School Board Head Discusses Problems

Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou introduced an innovation at his monthly meeting with school officers and principals yesterday by asking them to submit questions on school administrative problems.

More than 30 questions were directed at the superintendent. The experiment was so successful that the principals and officers voted to make it a permanent feature of the meetings. All the questions, Dr. Ballou said, related strictly to school business problems.

Blaze Causes $3,500 Loss to Plant.

Eggs valued at $175 and two incubators were destroyed in a fire that caused damage estimated at $3,500 at the Hillcrest Bakery, a mile west of Gaithersburg, Md., yesterday.

The fire was confined to one wing of the building by efforts of the Gaithersburg-Washington Grove fire department, and 3,000 eggs and two other incubators were saved. The loss was partially covered by insurance.

Budget Based On Percentage Wins Hearing

Chairman Cannon of the House District appropriations subcommittee yesterday announced that he would consider the proposal of Senator Thomas, of Oklahoma, to fix a percentage Federal contribution at the beginning of the budget hearings next Monday.

He expressed the view, however, that the percentage proposal is not practical and intimated that it has scant chance of being adopted in the House in view of past reductions.

"However," he said, "the committee is amenable to the will of the House."

The pending District budget carries the lowest Federal contribution within recent years, $5,700,000, the same figure inserted by the budget director in the 1934 appropriations bill and approved by a very economically minded special session of Congress.

Senator Thomas proposed several months ago that Senate and House sub-committees dealing with District appropriations reach an agreement before the bill is acted on and thus avoid the perennial wrangling between the House and the Senate as to what the Federal Government will pay in lump sum to the District.

Cannon expressed a willingness to bring the two committees together, but declined to call his subcommittee until the District hearings were scheduled.

The speed with which financial legislation is being pushed through the House and the fact that the Budget Bureau retained the 1934 contribution figure in the 1935 estimates are construed as not encouraging for the District.

Cannon said the hearing will be moved as rapidly as possible, with afternoon and morning sessions, but that every civic agency will be given a chance to appear.

Man Is Held For Mystery Death Probe

Niece Identifies Body of Victim; Dual Studies Opened.

While one man is held for questioning, independent investigations by police and the coroner's office last night sought to untangle the mysterious death of a 56-year-old widow, registered under an assumed name at a downtown apartment hotel.

Shortly after 8 a. m. yesterday Dr. John M. Baber, of 1819 G street northwest, was summoned to attend an "ill woman" in an apartment at 600 Twentieth street northwest. The woman, registered as "Mrs. F. H. Smith," was pronounced dead soon after his arrival.

Police arrested a man allegedly found in the apartment, and the woman's body was ordered to the District Morgue. Later identification revealed the woman was Mrs. Annie M. King, a widow, who recently came here from San Francisco, Calif.

Believe Woman Poisoned.

A certificate of death was withheld after Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy said an autopsy disclosed traces of poison and alcohol.

Identification of Mrs. King followed a visit to the morgue by a niece, Mrs. William D. Thompson, of Lyon Village, Va. Although police said Mrs. King, with an alleged companion, registered at the hotel Wednesday, her niece said she had been in Washington some time and had always lived at the Twentieth street address.

Hotel officials said a couple signed as "Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Smith" less than 24 hours before.

Dr. Murphy said that findings of the autopsy would be presented to the District chemist for analysis.

T. L. Jones Questioned.

Meanwhile, homicide squad detectives questioned Thomas L. Jones, 48, of 1014 Tenth street northwest, reputed to have been in the apartment. It was he, they said, who summoned Dr. Baber.

Evidences that the couple had been drinking were found, police declared.

Mrs. Thompson told police that her aunt often visited in Lyon Village and she saw her in Washington Wednesday. Mrs. King is survived by one daughter.

Students Needing CWA Aid Listed

Ballou Prepares Analysis to Help Colleges Here.

A detailed list of mid-year high school graduates, giving their scholastic rating and financial situation, is now being prepared by Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou for the information of heads of local colleges and universities in selecting students for admission under the CWA program.

The information is expected to be of great help in selecting the students most deserving the CWA aid.

The students themselves will apply for admission to the colleges and universities. Those admitted will have part time jobs paid out of CWA funds.

Robb, Means and Fox Prosecutor, Transferred

Roger Robb, 26-year-old assistant United States attorney, was relieved of his duties as a Government prosecutor in Police Court yesterday and transferred to District Supreme Court.

Robb has been active in handling Government prosecutions in Police Court since 1931. He will continue similar duties in his new post. Among Robb's important assignments was his appointment to aid in hearings against Gaston B. Means and Norman (The Fox) Whitaker.

Hamas' Manager Spurns Carnera Match for Bout With Max Baer

Harvey Sees Bigger Gate By Move

Likely to Pass Up Shot at Title, He Says, After Huddle at Garden.

Many Cities Seek Baer-Hamas; Gotham Ball Parks Available.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15 (U.P.).—As negotiations proceeded today toward a bout between those two conquerors of Max Schmeling—Steve Hamas and Maxie Baer—old Charley Harvey, dean of American boxing managers and Hamas' pilot, made one of the most unusual announcements in boxing history.

"I'll probably turn down offers from Madison Square Garden for Hamas to take a crack at the world title," Harvey said, "in order to throw Hamas into the ring with Baer, one of the leading contenders."

He said this just before going into a huddle with Col. John Reed Kilpatrick, president of the Garden corporation. It is understood the Garden wants Hamas to meet the winner of the Carnera-Loughran title fight at Miami, February 28.

Catches Garden's Eye.

As far as the Garden is concerned Hamas now is the logical contender for the heavyweight crown. The Garden is unable to do business with Baer, and his handlers, Ancil Hoffman and Jack Dempsey. King Levinsky, who was being groomed for a title shot, faded out of the picture in his recent poor showing with Charley Massera.

Why would the elderly Mr. Harvey prefer a Baer match to a title fight?

"It's quite simple," explained Charley. "Baer will draw more money against Hamas than any other opponent. It's a natural. Everyone regards Baer as a better fighter than either Carnera or Loughran. Moreover, Dempsey would be connected with the promotion of any fight in which Baer appears. That would add much to the gate. I would like to see Steve win the world championship, sure. But what we're both primarily interested in is making money. That's why I'm almost positive that Hamas' next opponent will be Baer."

Many Cities Seek Bout.

Harvel has offers from promoters in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles for a match with Baer. Today he held a lengthy conference with Tim Mara, the promoter who staged the Hamas-Loughran and the Baer-Schmeling bouts in New York.

Mara wants to match Hamas and Baer for 15 rounds at the Polo Grounds or Yankee Stadium in June. He has both ball parks under contract.

"Certainly, I'll cut Dempsey in on the promotion of such a fight," Mara told the United Press. "Both Dempsey and Ancil Hoffman are very good friends of mine. We teamed together in fine shape in the past and we can do it again."

Harvey told Mara he would be willing to accept such a match probably if he could sign Baer for it. Meanwhile, he is waiting to see what success promoters in other cities have in dealing with Baer.

Richmond Lawyer Says Race Bill Constitutional

Richmond, Va., Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Thomas B. Gay, widely known Richmond attorney, who drafted the bill now before the General Assembly which would permit parimutuel betting on horse races in Virginia, said he is convinced the bill is constitutional.

While lotteries have been forbidden by constitution in Virginia since 1852, Mr. Gay said, the parimutuel system of betting on horse races is not a "lottery" in the meaning of the law.

He cited a number of authorities to show that "lotteries" and "gaming" are entirely different things under judicial decisions. Gaming is prohibited in Virginia by statute, but not by constitution.

Lexington High Spurt Trims Clifton Forge

Clifton Forge, Va., Feb. 15 (Spl.).—Playing brilliantly in the final quarter, Lexington High School's basketball team defeated the Clifton Forge five, 35 to 30, here. The winners trailed during the first half, drew up to even terms during the third period and finished with a burst of speed in the last quarter.

Clifton Forge had the edge in field goals, registering 13 to 12 for Lexington, but the invaders scored 11 points on free throws to 4 for the Mountaineers. High scorers were Scruggs, of Clifton Forge, with 13 points and Deaver, of Lexington, with 12 points.

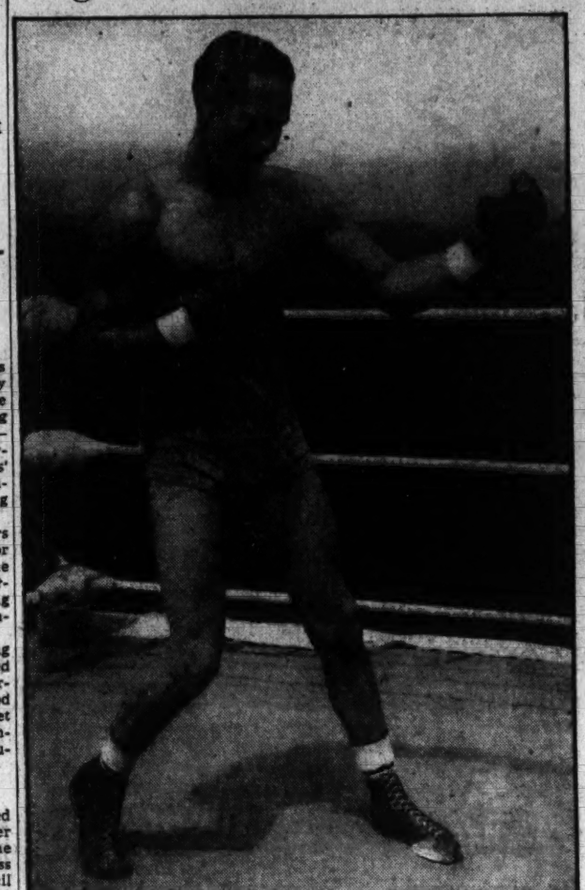
Baer Develops Girl Trouble Again—$50,000 Worth Latest



MAX BAER.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—More girl trouble—$50,000 worth, this time—descended today upon the curly, black head of Max Baer, the larruping Lothario, of Livermore, Calif.

Miss Shirley La Belle was disclosed to have sued him for damages as the result of an alleged criminal attack at Baer's hotel last December 20, because of which, she says, she is an expectant mother.

The affair became public when the prize fighter moved to have Miss La Belle examined before trial. Supreme Court Justice Bernard L. Shientag reserved decision.

Benjamin Pepper, attorney for the heavyweight boxer and night club entertainer, said Baer denies having had any relations with Miss La Belle. He told the court she accosted Baer outside a theater where he was appearing December 15 and asked him for money, which he gave her.

Later, Pepper continued, she wrote Baer "making amatory suggestions," and on the night of the twentieth accosted him outside his hotel and asked him to get her a room there, which he did. Pepper branded the case extortion.

On December 29 Baer was served with a summons in a $150,000 breach of promise suit brought by Bee Starr, circus aerialist. He has been named in other suits of that nature on the Coast.

Eastern Downs Maryland Frosh

EASTERN HIGH SCHOOL'S championship basket ball crew rode roughshod over the Maryland Frosh quintet on the College Parker's floor yesterday to defeat the Terp yearlings, 29-24.

Starting the scoring rampage at the start of the game, the Eastern team cracked through the Frosh defense to take a commanding lead at the end of the first quarter and a 15-5 advantage at the half.

Eastern Finishes Fast.

However, the District champs' attack bogged down to start the third period and the Marylanders ran the count to 17-16 at the end of the three-quarter mark. But the final chapter of the game was an exact replica of the first two periods, the District five forging ahead to win comfortably.

It was the final game of the season for the baby Terps, and the second triumph in two days by the Kelleymen, they having defeated the George Washington freshmen outfit Wednesday, 33-31.

Ruppert Calls Coast's Ruth Offer Silly

Sounds Like Lot of Cheap California Publicity, He Declares.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees, tonight characterized as "all very silly" the suggestion advanced by the San Francisco Club that Babe Ruth's baseball life would be prolonged by transferring his activities to the Pacific Coast League for 1934, if he failed to round into shape for the coming American League campaign.

"Ruth is going to play for the Yankees this year and for as long thereafter as he is able," declared the colonel. "He wouldn't go back to the minor leagues, anyway, under any circumstances."

Told about Ty Cobb's praise of the coast as "a paradise for the ball player," Col. Ruppert laughed and commented:

"That sounds to me like a lot of cheap publicity for the California climate."

Fastest Trio Vie in Race At Mile

Venzke, Cunningham, Bonthron Will Run Tomorrow.

Present Records Stand Better-Than-Even Chance of Fading.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15 (U.P.).—When Joie Ray and Paavo Nurmi ran a mile in 4:12 back in 1925, they said the limit had been reached; that man could never travel that distance on the boards in faster time.

But along in 1932, Gus Venzke, then a high school youth, came to New York and lowered that record to the amazing time of 4:10. Again the members of the old school predicted the record would stand for many years to come.

Now, with three of the greatest milers the country has ever produced preparing to match strides in the New York A. C. games here Saturday night, even the backers of the old guard are more than willing to admit that the present mark again stands a better-than-even chance of being shattered.

Trio Face Each Other.

The present record holder, the most consistent indoor miler of the season and the lad who has run the second fastest mile in history—all will face each other in a race that promises to be a throwback to the day when Ray and Nurmi had the fans hanging from the rafters watching their "mile-of-the-century" series.

Venzke, now of Pennsylvania, will be in there trying to win back the Baxter mile championship he won in 1932 as he raced to the 4:10 record. Glenn Cunningham, who came out of Kansas University last year to replace Venzke as the premier indoor miler of 1933, will be on hand faced with his first formidable opposition of the season.

That opposition is something of a question mark. Bill Bonthron, of Princeton, will furnish it, and whether he can run a mile indoors in the same manner as he did last summer on the cinder paths is one of the reasons why the Garden will be packed to capacity when the runners toe the starting line.

Ran 4:08.7 Mile.

Bonthron has a 4:08.7 outdoor mile to his credit, made when he trailed Jack Lovelock across the finish line at Princeton as the New Zealander ran the course in 4:07.6.

Last year the Princeton ace spent most of his time indoors running on the Tiger relay team. This season, however, that team is no longer in action, so Bonthron is doing some solo racing for himself.

His first attempt of the year on the boards last week at Boston in the 1,000-yard run resulted in an easy victory. Cunningham, in the same meet, was triumphant in the hunter mile. Saturday night this pair will meet for the first time.

Whether a record is broken probably will depend very much upon what Venzke does. Gens has previously elected to set the pace in his recent races with Cunningham—and always was defeated. His coach, Lawson Robertson, says this time his pupil will be running his own race.

Middletown Divides With Frederick Teams

Middletown, Md., Feb. 15 (Spl.).—Middletown divided honors with Frederick in the final game of the schedule in the Southern division of the county league, the Middletown boys winning, 12 to 11, while the Frederick girls routed the valley lassies, 36 to 6. The victory deadlocked Frederick and Middletown for the pennant and an extra game will be played to determine the pennant winner, which will meet Emmitsburg, pennant winner of the Northern division, for the championship of the county.

Lassiter Is Reported Offered Mexico Post

Charlotte, N. C., Feb. 15 (A.P.).—The Charlotte News today says Robert Lassiter, who captained the 1933 Yale Football Team, has been tendered the post of head football coach at the University of Mexico.

Lassiter, a Charlotte boy, will graduate in June.

Should Lassiter go to the Mexican institution he would succeed two other former Yale stars, Reggie Root and Charles Ludlum.

Shepherd Five Scores.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., Feb. 15 (Spl.).—Shepherd College quintet gained revenge over West Liberty College, of Wheeling, W. Va., here when it trounced the Upstaters, 40 to 14, after having met a defeat at the visitors' hands, 44 to 39, several weeks ago.

Sarazen Sees Walker Cup To British

Predicts Decisive Win; Says Americans Not as Fine Golfers.

Declares U. S. Hasn't Sufficient Massed Strength.

MIAMI, Feb. 15 (U.P.).—Admitting that he has been wrong before, Gene Sarazen climbed bravely out on a limb today and forecast that the British will win this year's Walker Cup golf championship.

"I've been wrong before," Gene said, "but they can't shoot me for it and since you ask I'm telling you I expect England to score a decisive victory in the cup play over there."

Sarazen, wintering here as head of the Miami Biltmore pro staff, feels that America doesn't boast enough massed strength to beat the British on their home ground.

"If the Walker Cup was played with four to a side I'd go heavily on our boys," he said. "But the British, despite a very popular notion to the contrary, are better golfers than the Americans. Any other idea is just a myth. It grew out of the fact that Americans, Hagen, Jones, Denny Shute—and once I got there, too—have been able to win a heavy share of the British National Championships. But the British generally are fine golfers. They have more golfing lore around St. Andrews than we'll ever develop; it's born in them."

Sarazen has a high regard for Francis Ouimet, twice United States amateur champion, both as a player and as a leader.

Made Logical Choice.

"The U. S. G. A. made the logical choice when they picked Francis to captain our team," he said. "If the Walker Cup was a four-man business you could bet all the tea in China that we'd take it. If I had my way I'd pick Ouimet, Johnny Goodman, George Dunlap and Will Turnesa to go against England's best four who probably would be Tolley, Rex Hartley, Wethered and Burke.

"But that's as far as it goes. We haven't a group which could do things with such Britishers as McRuvie, McLean (there's a great one for you) Campbell, young DeForest, old Mike Scott, Bourne and some others."

Sarazen is highly enthusiastic over Willie Turnesa, youngest brother of the large Elmsford, N. Y., golfing family. All other Turnesas are professionals. Gene says that Willie is "pretty soon" champion.

"I wouldn't be surprised to see Willie come through as early as this year," Sarazen said. "I think he's the finest hitter to have come along since Jones, and all he needs is a little more experience and some added weight."

Turnesa, Sarazen feels, well might have been chosen for the Walker Cup team, but believes that the U. S. G. A. was justified in omitting him.

Farrell, Star Terp Boxer, Returns

AL FARRELL, pride of the plaza and star University of Maryland gridman and boxer, returns to the squared circle tomorrow night after an enforced absence from athletics of one semester because of scholastic difficulties. He will box in the heavyweight class for the Terrapins against Washington and Lee.

The bouts follow a program of cadet drilling, singing, gymnastics, fencing and hurdling which has been arranged as part of the "All-University Night" celebration. The basket ball game, between Maryland and Washington College, opens the program at 8 o'clock.

In Fine Condition.

Though Farrell has not participated in any actual bouts, he is in fine condition and ready to go. Coach Jack Harmony believes the big 210-pounder has improved remarkably over last season when he lost only one bout. Incidentally, his only loss was to Washington and Lee because of holding.

The remainder of the team will be Waller, 115; Carroll, 125; Babcock, 135; Webb, 145; McAboy, 155; Herbsleb, 165; McCaw, 175; Farrell, heavyweight. The Generals will be represented by Resler, 115; Davies, 125; Moore, 135; Mincher, 145; Stuart, 155; Short, 165; Martin, 175, and Mowrer, heavyweight.

One of the highlights of the special events will be a mock antiaircraft attack staged by a platoon of R. O. T. C. Toy balloons will go winging through the coliseum to be brought down by flash pots. Machine-gun drills, in addition to infantry exhibitions, are scheduled also.

In order to keep the program moving on schedule, no one will be admitted to the coliseum after 8:45 o'clock. The calisthenics and other portions of the program following basket ball are expected to end around 10:30 o'clock and will be followed immediately by boxing.

Too Bashful for Preacher, Gehringer Cast as Groom

Well, Charley Gehringer is going into society, playing a part in a hospital benefit play to be given by the Marillac Guild next Thursday.

It wasn't Charley's idea. The play director was casting around in her mind for someone to play the part of the minister in a mock wedding. It called for someone with self-reliance; someone accustomed to performing before the public.

Who, she reasoned, could meet those qualifications better than a baseball player, who must perform his feats on the diamond without a thought for the yelling thousands in the grandstands and bleachers? So Gehringer, the Detroit Tigers' great second baseman and one of the few professional baseball players who winter in Michigan, was chosen.

But when Charley appeared for the first rehearsal, there was some consternation.

Was this bashful young man, the director asked herself and her associate directors, the great Gehringer who was so oblivious to his audience while snatching baseballs out of thin air at Navin Field?

Out of the conference emerged a decision that anyone so bashful could hardly take the role of marrying parson. He might forget the words, or read the wrong verse.

However, his talents won't be wasted. He is going to play the part of bridegroom.

He will wear muttonchop whiskers and a frock coat and the more shy and ill at ease he is, the better pleased the director will be.

Pulle-e-e-se, Mr. Breeder

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15 (Spl.).—This department paid its annual visit to the three-day mutt fest staged in Madison Square Garden by the Westminster Kennel Club, made the discovery which becomes apparent to every visitor to the show—namely, that no pup in the whole big barn is as good as one's own dog—wandered down the aisles of dogs and listened ecstatically to the owners knock one another and pan the judges, fell in love with something that looks like a small woolly lamb called a Bedlington, got bit by something nasty in brown called a "Boxer," crawled into the Great Dane cages and wallowed in them, set around for a while and watched the judging and came to the conclusion that there were some very silly and undignified things going on, and wondered why grown men did such things.

I do not seem to understand this business of "handling" dogs in the ring. I do not see why a guy just doesn't bring his pup in, let the judges give him the once over and then take him out again without trying to remake the dog all over again while he is in the ring.

Now I like a dog as well as anybody and always have at least a couple around, but I do not try to bend their legs from east to west, or get their tails to stand at an angle of 37 degrees, or pin their ears back, or get their posteriors to slant up, or down.

I just say, "Hyah, pup," and take him into bed with me and scratch his ears and let him hold his legs any way that seems to be comfortable to him, or utilitarian in getting him over the ground, and what he does with his tail is strictly his own problem. I know that he comes from a fine family and that seems to be about all that is necessary. I think that dogs might be judged on the same rational basis. After all, a dog will always be a dog, no matter what you do to him and to try to make him look like anything else seems to be a waste of time. To get him to look like a better kind of a dog than he was built seems foolish.

He would grab the dog's tail and run it out between his fingers. It would then, for a few seconds, stand out stiff and straight like a spike. Then it would begin to droop and wilt like a perishing blossom and finally wind up nicely curled between his legs.

Then the man would do it all over again. If he did it once he did it 30 times. At the same time with his other hand he was massaging the dog's snoot, pulling it out the other way, changing the drape and hang of his ears, retwisting his legs, pulling out the breast bone, spreading out the hind legs and simply worrying the hell out of the poor beast.

At another time, a different chap was showing some kind of terrier and was having the most awful battle to make it stand a certain way, apparently a way that wasn't natural to the dog, or the dog would have stood that way without being forced to do it. He would fix the hind legs and the front legs would shift. Then he would fix the front legs and the hind end would collapse. And all the while, he was brushing and combing and powdering and fussing and cocking an anxious eye at the judges to see whether they were coming near.

As they approached down the line, he redoubled his efforts, hoisting the dog up in the middle, hauling down on his legs, brushing his fur the wrong way, making funny noises so that the dog would cock his head and look cunning. Of course, when they finally got to him the dog was sitting with his legs crossed, his hind legs doubled up under him, his tongue out and a look of complete resignation on his face. It was the one bright spot in the judging.

I do not mean to hurt the feelings of dog fanciers or dog judges, but I think that all of these people, especially the breeders and exhibitors, ought to do all of these things before they show the dogs—I mean if they want the tail to stick out, they ought to breed it that way, or make it stick with glue, or brace it the way a sculptor does. It seems to me that once a dog is built a certain way, there is really nothing one can do about it and it all becomes very discouraging to the prospective purchaser, because if I had to go around town tweezing, massaging, yanking, hauling, pulling and stretching my dog all the time to make him look the way he did when I bought him or when he won the blue ribbon, I think I would give the whole idea up as too much of a nuisance.

And I can not afford to hire a dog valet to do it for me. If my dog can't stand up himself I'll be damned if I'm going to prop him up or wag his tail for him.

Mrs. Moody Seen Returning May 1

Fuller Bases Relief on Her Improvement.

San Francisco, Feb. 15 (A.P.).—C. W. "Pop" Fuller, veteran tennis enthusiast and first coach of Helen Wills Moody, expressed the opinion today that Mrs. Moody would be able to resume practice by May 1.

The present Wimbledon champion and many times American title holder has shown steady improvement since a displaced vertebra forced her to default to Helen Jacobs in the 1933 National finals at Forest Hills, N. Y.

Fuller's belief was based merely on the satisfactory manner in which she has responded to medical treatment.

Mrs. Moody herself said: "I only wish I could set a date on which to resume practice and have it turn out that way. I'm feeling much better, but I certainly have no idea as to when I can return to the courts."

Fights at Danville.

Danville, Va., Feb. 15 (Spl.).—Jack Lockhart and Harry Feerstein will meet at City Armory tomorrow night in a scheduled ten-round bout supported by a card of four other events.

Vince Dundee Faces Jeby Tonight

Is Seen Putting New Life in 160-Pound Division; Champion Choice.

CHICAGO, Feb. 15 (U.P.).—Vince Dundee, of Baltimore, middleweight champion, and Ben Jeby, of New York, former champion, will meet in a ten-round non-title bout in the Chicago Stadium tomorrow night, which promises to put new life in the 160-pound division.

Although no title will be involved, the match is likely to be the forerunner of one, and possibly two, title bouts here within the next three months.

Dundee already has agreed to defend his title twice under the Stadium's direction, and is considering shifting his headquarters from the East to Chicago if he builds up a following here in his first Chicago appearance against Jeby.

Bout on March 16.

Last Bout a Draw.

Dundee and Jeby went 15 rounds to a draw in their last bout in Madison Square Garden. At that time Jeby was recognized as middleweight champion by the New York State Athletic Commission. Jeby later was knocked out by Lou Brouillard, who had previously whipped Mickey Walker, giving Brouillard a clear claim to the 160-pound title. Dundee wrested the title from Brouillard.

Ex-Palace Man Returns Here

Knoblauch With Cult Team Against Heurichs Reds.

A former local Palace Pro courthawk, now with a beard, will appear here Sunday afternoon with the House of David basket ball team, which meets the Heurich Reds, local pro basket ball team. The Beaver is Harry Knoblauch, center of the bewhiskered cult team, and who, since his appearance here with the Palace outfit, has played with the Brooklyn Visitations, Paterson, Rochester and other outstanding quintets of the American League.

One of the greatest basket ball players to appear here with Knoblauch is Harry Forman, captain and forward of the invaders. He is a brother of Lou Forman, center of the famous Philadelphia Sphas, which for many years monopolized the top rung in the now defunct Eastern League.

However the Reds are in trim to give the hairy hardwoodsmen a licking or trimming, as it were. Berger, who was more than slightly off his eye against the Trenton Moose last week, and Johnny Fenlon, former G. W. star, who has been handicapped by a slight touch of the flu, are on the mend and hope to be in the thick of the campaign Sunday.

The fray is set for 3 o'clock in the G. W. gym, and is to be preceded by the Army Medical Center-Fort Humphreys clash billed for 1:30 o'clock.

Pin League Formed At Fredericksburg

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 13 (Spl.).—A new six-team independent duckpin league was organized at a meeting at the Arcade Alleys, at which officers were elected, teams drawn up, and ten-week schedule of Monday and Tuesday night games adopted.

South Carolina Bows To Navy in Gym, 47-7

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 15 (Spl.).—On their way to West Point for a meeting with the Army Cadets, the gymnasium team of University of South Carolina stopped here today for a hurriedly arranged match with the Annapolis Midshipmen. The Navy lads won with ease, 47 to 7.

Though without two or more stars that carried them to intercollegiate titles for a number of yeras, the Tars demonstrated they have a well balanced troupe, calculated to give a good account of itself during the impending season. The Gamecocks were outclassed, the Middies winning first in all events except tumbling. In this event, O. A. Mato gave a brilliant demonstration of springs, twists and flips that far outshone anything the Middies had to offer. Navy's best performers were Kunkle, on the side horse, Stone, on the bars and rings, and Bemis on the parallel bars. Navy will open its regular schedule against Princeton, February 24.

Parallel bars—Won by Bemis (Navy), 620; second, Akerovd (Navy), 591; third, O. A. Mato (South Carolina), 541.

Flying rings—Won by Stone (Navy), 598; second, Beaman (Navy), 560; third, Boyd (Navy), 547.

Tumbling—Won by O. A. Mato (South Carolina), 597; second, Robbins (Navy), 538; third, Metcalf (Navy), 506.

Coequel Overtakes Gay Joe in Final Drive for Third Triumph in 4 at Hialeah

Black Target Scores in First, Pays $37.10; Ladogan Wins.

HIALEAH PARK, Feb. 15 (AP). A new threat for the Florida Derby developed here this afternoon. Coequel, W. Graham's gray filly, which came to Florida from Texas and showed impressive form in sprint races, drove to a well-earned victory in the 1 mile of the Eau Gallie purse for her third triumph in four local starts. The daughter of Cotlogomor ran the 8 furlongs in 1:37 1-5 to beat Mrs. J. Grossman's Gay Joe by a length. R. L. Woodard's Brown Toney was third, two additional lengths behind. The winner paid $9.80.

Boy Valet, an E. R. Bradley candidate, ran disappointingly. A heavy favorite, he trailed the field most of the trip and made up some ground in the stretch to finish fourth.

Double for Coucci.

Silvio Coucci, now riding in great form, completed a double astride the winner. The Bronx Italian broke his mount on top, but found Gay Joe's early speed something not to trifle with. While Coequel dropped back, Gay Joe skimmed along with a good lead, racing Brown Toney into defeat. Bender first also took a crack at the leader, but he was not equal to the task. It remained for Coequel to stage a powerful rush in the final furlong, the filly overtaking Gay Joe in the final drive to win going away.

Black Target, the bad post actor, owned, trained and ridden by A. "Whitey" Abel, returned to competition after nearly a month's layoff and provided an upset in the initial event. Placed on the outside, the colt broke on top, ran Style Corner into submission and beat the latter by two lengths in easy fashion, returning $37.10 for $2. Style Corner, though tiring, lasted to save the place by a half length from In High. Happy Scot, heavily backed, was always outrun.

Hasty Glance Wins.

Mrs. P. A. B. Widener's filly, Hasty Glance, running with a pep and dash she failed to exhibit in her last outing, was an easy winner of the 2-year-old dash. The daughter of Haste, sped home by three lengths and paid $19.70. Migrate and Neon, both well backed, were next in line, a head apart. Hasty Glance broke alertly and, showing keen speed, drew far clear in the final furlong.

Butter Beans, $5.40 favorite, turned in a game performance to lead home seven other platers over the mile distance of the third. The mare broke on top in a bad start, but was crowded back to last place. Coucci got her clear of trouble coming to the far turn and taking the outside course, urged his mount to the front late in the stretch. Excitation, the pacemaker, weakened when challenged and was beaten two lengths. Polisher lost the place by a head.

Gilbert Rides Double.

Johnny Gilbert, the solemn Syrian from Kansas, rang up a double when he drove the $6.60 choice, Ladogan, to a half-length success in the fourth contest. Fire Mask, finishing fast under a whip-lashing, was second, a length clear of Shrysmute. Ladogan sprinted into a daylight lead over Fire Mask, but had to be driven out to hold his rival safe in the late stages.

Earl Porter got back into his stride in the sixth event. The Illinois boy broke Eurydice on top and kept her there to win by a head in a finish that saw four horses heads apart. Eurydice was favorite, returning $4.10. Inflate was second, Indian Salute, third, and Flaghorn, fourth, all gaining on the winner.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Charles V, Holy Roman Emperor, and King of Spain as Charles T. closed his long and eventful reign with abdication of his various powers, and a mock funeral in which he himself took an active part. The story is that Charles, after he turned his duties as king over to others, decided that it would be better for him to perform his own funeral than to wait and let others do it for him after his death.

Accordingly, the church at Yuste in Estremadura, where Charles had gone to live, was arranged for the funeral. All church officials were on hand, as was the ruler's household, all in deep mourning. While mass for the dead was sung, Charles gave his taper to the officiating priest—signifying his desire to yield his soul up as if he were dead.

One of the luckiest gamblers in history was the French Marshal Massena, Prince of Essling. One night, it is recorded, he won 700,000 francs at the gaming tables. So terrified were the bankers that they offered him 50,000 if he would agree to remain away from the game the following night. Massena refused, and promptly won more than the 50,000 offered to him.

Nicholas I, of Russia, always had a new mattress provided for him every night. They were not expensive—just a bag full of new straw, but they had to be provided for the czar every night whether he was at home or traveling.

Hialeah Race Track, Feb. 15.

Dear Al:

Just to show that we can hit something resembling a winning stride at times, Mike and Bill supplied the dear public with three winners today. And not a disqualification in the carload. Of course, our particular point of pride was the naming of Coequel to take the feature and the $9.80 mutuel that went therewith. Porter aided us, by riding his fifty-second victory on Eurydice. Previously, Gilbert had piloted the scampering Ladogan home. Add to these a couple of seconds and it was not a bad day from a Bennings angle. We have been over the books carefully regarding tomorrow's card. So help me.

BILL.

First Race—Guess I will have to hop aboard the band wagon and pick Lady Reigh. I have liked this one from the start, but tomorrow we will be lucky if we get a bag of peanuts for each $2 investment. Dolette and Jane Foster appear best of the others.

Second Race—Black Birder gets one more chance from the Bennings camp. That last effort was marked by poor racing luck. Dander and Tabitha will be ready if the fop fellow makes any mistakes.

Third Race—Lofty Lady has all the ear marks of a winning favorite here. Her last win, plus those sizzling workouts, makes her a standout. Davoc is not to be trifled with in this class and will run a good race. Fair Joan for the minor award.

Fourth race—Pardee folded on me in the closing strides the other day. Likely to improve off that effort and lead these to the wire. Bright Bubble and Major General for the rest.

Fifth race—Monel will have to be caught before this purse goes to another. Has plenty of speed now and is going to be hard to defeat. Curacao and Coucci will be ready for a hard race. Blessed Event for the show end.

Sixth race—Fairly Wild shapes up best in this group, but is undependable at short odds. The right race would take this purse. One Chance, in an ordinary field, is dangerous. Don't pass up Gracias entirely. This 100-1 shot is going to pop real soon.

North Carolina Meets Duke Tonight

Tarheels Will Win Title of Big Five If They Beat Blue Devils.

DURHAM, N. C., Feb. 15 (Spl.).—Duke University's four-year reign in North Carolina Big Five circles may come to an end in Duke gymnasium tomorrow night, when the Blue Devils face the White Phantoms of Carolina in the State's most important cage encounters of the 1934 campaign.

There will be no freshman preliminary and the varsity battle is slated to start promptly at 8:15 o'clock. Several hundred additional seats have been installed in Duke gymnasium to take care of the more than capacity crowd expected.

The Tarheels, breezing along at the top of the Big Five since their recent win over State, and perched near the leading position in the Southern Conference race, will take over the championship crown if they defeat the Blue Devils tomorrow night.

Still Must Face State.

It will be the Phantoms' last Big Five contest, while the Blue Devils have yet to face North Carolina State in Duke gymnasium a week from Saturday. Should the Blue Devils take the contest they would still have to defeat State to win their fifth consecutive title.

The Blue Devils were being rated on even terms with the Tarheels until the Davidson game Monday night deprived them of the services of Charlie Kunkle, sophomore forward, who is still in the hospital with a badly sprained ankle and is definitely out of the contest. The loss of Kunkle, who has started every game since early in the season, puts Duke at a decided disadvantage in the contest despite the fact that they will be playing on their home floor.

Rubio Captures Orleans Feature

Scores by Four Lengths, to Return $7.60.

New Orleans, Feb. 15 (AP).—The Paper Box Manufacturers Handicap, the best offering on today's card, was won by T. C. Worden's Rubio, which beat Mrs. A. R. Smith's Out Bound by four lengths. Out Bound headed Mrs. J. Diebold's Walter D. for the place. The 6-furlong distance was covered by the son of Runnymede—Gwendola in 1:12 3-5.

Rubio broke running and promptly opened a daylight lead which he maintained throughout. Out Bound and Walter D. fought it out in a stretch drive for the place. The winner paid $7.60 for a $2 mutuel ticket.

Speed Skating Races At Silver Spring Rink

Two speed races have been scheduled for the Silver Spring Armory rink tomorrow night, to round out the week-end sports program. A 1-mile dash for women will get under way at 9:30 o'clock, followed by a 2-mile event for male performers. Entries will be accepted up to the starting time of each race, and a number of the outstanding performers of the Capital area are to compete.

The week-end program is to be featured by a Sunday roller hockey clash between the Silver Flashes and the Baltimore Pirates.

One of a series of contests being held to determine the most graceful skating pair in the Washington area, is scheduled for the rink at 10 o'clock tonight.

Virginia Drills For Ring Duel With Yale

Coach La Rowe to Decide Today on His Line-Up for Tomorrow.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Feb. 15 (Spl.).—Virginia's boxers probably will face Yale in Richmond Saturday night at 8:30 o'clock in the Mosque in the same order in which they met the Navy last week-end and won a 4-to-3 decision to become the first team ever to defeat the Middies two seasons in a row.

Coach Johnny LaRowe hasn't quite decided, but he thinks he will let Capt. Harold Stuart, Lyndon Lee and Eugene Hourihan move down a weight as they did against Navy. He'll make up his mind after watching the final workout of the Cavaliers tomorrow.

Seven Bouts Slated.

Yale will not enter a heavyweight, which means that the Virginians need not have one ready. The Cavaliers won't claim the unlimited match on a forfeit, however, but have agreed to wave intercollegiate ring rules and count only seven bouts.

Archie Hahn, jr., Virginia's bantamweight champion of the Southern Conference, must meet F. Newman of the Elis, who lost the only bout dropped by Yale to the Army last week-end when the New Haven boys earned a 5-to-2 victory over the West Pointers.

One of the fastest scraps of the evening is expected to be in the featherweight class between Virginia's Gordon Rainey and Yale's "Killer" Levine, one of the two best boxers on the Eli squad.

The Yale captain, Dick Thomson, an experienced boxer, will compete in the lightweight class against Lewis H. Bosher, jr., the only Richmonder who is likely to see action. The welterweight match will bring together Maynard Womer, of the Cavaliers, against O. Brower 3d., of the Elis, two men boxing their first varsity season.

If Capt. Stuart, of Virginia, drops down to the junior middleweight division he will have to take on a Yale slugger, H. Huffman, a sophomore who made his ring debut by gaining a draw with the veteran F. F. Forte, of Army, last Saturday.

Lee's opponent in the middleweight class will be Willard Cates, son of John M. Cates, former director of athletics at Yale.

Stocks Drive Higher Under Wider Demand

Industrials Take Lead as Sales Volume Rises to 2,972,268 Shares.

New York, Feb. 15 (AP).—Rising stock prices found volume increasing today. Demand was broad, especially for industrials, and several new highs for the past couple of years or longer were recorded.

Net gains of 1 to 4 points were plentiful, the averages being up nearly 2 points in a turnover of 2,972,268 shares, more than a million above yesterday's.

A boost for second-grade bonds as well as improvement in numerous commodities accompanied manifestations of cheerfulness among stock traders.

Recovery Follows Shakeout.

The speculative shakeouts of last week have been followed by prompt recovery. This is attributed partly to a belief that regulation, as ultimately adopted, may be less drastic than is provided for in the measures now before Congress.

The Fletcher-Rayburn legislation is being closely analyzed, and critics have been prompt to express themselves. Nervousness over the outlook in this direction would appear to have been tempered by the favorable character of general business news, which is mostly on the side of recovery.

Today's stock market witnessed a brisk inquiry for many low priced shares, though those in upper brackets were not neglected. Among shares making new highs were American Can, Continental Can, Montgomery Ward, Congoleum and Kelvinator. Mining issues glistened again as bar silver rose to 45⅜ cents an ounce, its best price since 1930, reflecting reports that Washington contemplated action which would have the effect of increasing the metal's mine value. Granby was a new favorite, up a couple of points. U. S. Smelting jumped about 4. Park Utah, Magma, Kennecott and Anaconda also rallied.

Gainers on Active List.

Miscellaneous gainers in the active list included Austin Nichols, Marshall Fields, Eaton Manufacturing, Murray Body, American Beet Sugar, Fox, Paramount and Collins & Aikman. Steels were at their best in the forenoon, but several representatives of that industry rose more than a point net. Rails had some busy moments and were firm. There was a tendency in Wall street to regard the notice of a new wage reduction as designed for bargaining purposes.

Aircrafts were somewhat indisposed as the mail controversy continued. Utilities made rather narrow responses to the bullish urge that characterized most other groups, though American Telephone was up around a point. The company's own earnings for last year, equivalent to $7.37 a share, against $7.82 in 1932, were about as forecast.

Heavy gold losses of the Bank of France in the last week for which statistics are available kept alive the question of France's ability to stick with the gold standard. It is understood that more recently the drain had slackened, but some bankers here wondered. With the dollar's premium reduced gold shipments to this country are less attractive.

Weekly Statement of Reporting Member Banks Reflects the Extent to Which Present Treasury Policy Is "Freezing" the Banking System.

By Ralph West Robey.

It has been a common statement for many months that to a greater and greater extent our commercial banks are becoming water-logged with United States Government obligations. Judging by the character of most discussions, however, there is only a limited appreciation of just how far the process already has gone. It no longer is a question of a situation that may develop some time in the future. Rather, the condition already is serious.

To appraise the situation exactly, of course, one would need to have complete statistics of all of our banks. These, unfortunately, are not available except at infrequent intervals, usually as of June 30, and even then, because of the mechanical problem of compilation, the figures are not published until some months after the date to which they refer. In order to get the current position of the banks, accordingly, it is necessary to use data of representative institutions.

Reporting Member Banks Reflects General Trend.

The so-called weekly reporting member banks are a group of such representative institutions. They are located in 90 of our leading cities and, while the number of institutions composing the group is relatively small, in the aggregate their resources make up a substantial proportion of the total resources of the banking system. Their reports as of the close of business each Wednesday, therefore, may be taken as a reasonably accurate reflection of the changes that are taking place in the loan and investment portfolios of the approximately 15,000 banks that now are in existence.

The last report of the group that is available is for February 7. It perhaps is most easily appraised by comparing the figures for this date with those for the same institutions of a year earlier. This means, obviously, that the comparison is being made with the time when the banking system was at just about its weakest point—some three weeks before the national holiday was declared.

On this basis it is found that the total loans today are $346,000,000 less than they were a year ago. Of this total reduction, $109,000,000 has occurred in loans on securities and $237,000,000 in "all others," or what usually are considered the commercial or business loans. Among the investments, other than in United States obligations, there has been a decline of $59,000,000. The holding of United States obligations, however, has increased during the period by $865,000,000.

Governments Only Category Now Larger Than Last Year.

Of the four divisions into which the loan and investment portfolios of the banks are divided, in other words, the only one that shows an increase over a year ago is United States obligations. On the liability side of the statement the greatest change is in Government deposits, the total being $769,000,000 greater than a year ago. This is the result, of course, of the purchase of the $1,000,000,000 Treasury offerings of a few weeks ago having been paid for by writing up deposits to the account of the Government.

Approached from the point of view of totals of the various items at present one finds equally interesting facts. These reporting member banks now hold $5,847,000,000 of Government obligations. Their total "commercial" loans are only $4,713,000,000, or more than $1,000,000,000 less, and their loans on securities are $3,487,000,000. Total demand deposits are $11,125,000,000, or less than twice the Government holding.

It must be obvious that this is not a healthy condition for our banks. These governments will remain outstanding for years, perhaps for generations. In every sense of the term they are long-term investments. An individual bank is able to reduce its holding, but the banking system as a whole can not make any substantial reduction except over a long period or at a heavy loss. By forcing an increasing volume of governments into the banking system, therefore, we simply again are engaged in getting the institutions into a "frozen" condition.

Oils, Metals and Utilities Join Climb; Trading, 443,000 Shares.

New York, Feb. 15 (AP).—The curb market moved up under a fresh demand for stocks today. Closing advances of 1 to more than 2 points were recorded liberally throughout the list. Many specialties improved in brisk buying. Oils, metals, utilities and alcohols participated prominently.

Fractional improvement was shown by Atlas Corporation and Butler Brothers. Parker Rust proof was an isolated soft spot. Trading activities in Walgreen common stock were transferred to the big board.

Consolidated Oil Dividend Is First Since '31

H. F. Sinclair Calls Return Evidence of Recovery; 28 Cents Voted.

New York, Feb. 15 (AP).—Directors of Consolidated Oil today declared a dividend of 28 cents a share, to be paid on April 7, on common stock of record March 10, the first dividend payment made since April, 1931.

Harry F. Sinclair described the dividend, which will amount to approximately $4,000,000, as a "recovery dividend" and said the directors intend to act on the dividend on August 31 and, at a later date, distribute "substantially all of the earnings made in 1934."

The payment is 3 cents more per share than the last dividend of 25 cents in 1931. The board also authorized the calling of $5,000,000 of the company's 7 per cent bonds.

Seaboard Oil Co. of Delaware today declared an extra dividend of 10 cents and the regular quarterly payment of 15 cents, both payable March 15 to holdings of record March 1. On December 15 a similar extra was paid.

Congoleum-Nairn, Inc., and subsidiaries report 1933 net income of $2,062,831, equivalent after preferred stock dividend to $1.66 a share of common stock. In 1932 the company had net income of $674,402, or 50 cents a share on the common.

The preliminary report of Northern Pacific Railroad for 1933 shows net income of $303,981 after taxes and charges, equal to 12 cents a share. This contrasts with loss of $1,991,407 in 1932.

Mathieson Alkali Works reports for 1933 net income of $1,224,878, equal, after charges and preferred dividends, to $1.70 a common share. This compared with $729,505, or 86 cents a common share in 1932.

Columbia Gas & Electric Corporation today reported for the quarter ended December 31 net income of $3,813,579 after all charges, compared with $5,184,778 in the final quarter of 1932.

Toledo, Ohio, Feb. 15 (AP).—Stockholders of the Owens-Illinois Glass Co. with their dividend checks tomorrow will receive a preliminary report of 1933 operations showing net earnings of $6,032,311.80, as compared with $2,067,885.72 for 1932.

The earnings are equal to $4.86 per share on the 1,200,000 shares of common stock outstanding as compared with $1.62 per share on 977,173 shares outstanding at close of 1932.

Cleveland, Feb. 15 (AP).—An increase of nearly $300,000 in the earnings of Richman Bros. Co. clothing manufacturers, was noted today in the company's report of operations for 1933.

Net profit for the year ended December 31 was $1,719,551 after depreciation, Federal taxes and similar charges, compared with $1,460,379 the previous year. The 1933 profits were equal to $2.84 a share on 603,446 shares of no par common stock, compared with $2.42 in 1932. Dividends paid in 1933 amounted to $3 a share.

Bond Market Speeds Up to New High Level

Demand for Listed Loans Broadens; Sales Up to $22,700,000.

New York, Feb. 15 (AP).—The bond market put on a burst of speed today as the demand for listed loans pushed many issues to their highest levels for the past two years or more.

While there were no outstanding news developments which might have affected senior securities as a whole, dealers said that the apparent absence of new offerings and the growing urge to invest idle funds were the principal factors in the expanded purchasing.

Transfers totaled $22,700,000, par value, against $19,303,000 yesterday. The average for 60 domestic corporate bonds advanced six-tenths of a point to 84.5, its peak since 1931.

Rails Lead Again.

Secondary rails again were the leaders. Gainers of 1 to 3 or more points here included some liens of Alleghany Corporation, Atlantic Coast Line, Baltimore & Ohio, Chicago & Eastern Illinois, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Rock Island, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, Louisville & Nashville, Missouri Pacific, New York Central, New Haven, Pennsylvania, Frisco, Southern Pacific, Southern, Wabash and Western Pacific.

Prime investment utilities and industrials were not neglected, but the advances were mostly fractional.

Best gains in these groups included Vanadium 5s, up 4; Utilities Power & Light 5s, up 2; Studebaker 6s, up 2⅛; Philadelphia Reading Coal & Iron 6s, up 3½; International Telephone debenture 4½s, up 2¼; International Paper 6s, up 2½; Hudson Coal 5s, up 2⅜; General Theater 6s, up 1⅛; Columbia Gas 5s, up 2⅛; American Rolling Mill 5s, up 1, and American & Foreign Power 5s, up 1. The Paramount Pictures group spurted 3 to 5 points.

U. S. Loans Pick Up.

U. S. Government loans picked up volume with gains of one-thirty-second to sixteen-thirty-seconds of a point. Around 1,084 of the uncalled Liberty Fourth 4¼s changed hands at an advance of three-thirty-seconds.

In the foreign section Royal Dutch 4s jumped 8¼ points following the decision of a Dutch court that, because of the multiple currency clause in these bonds, interest must be paid in gold florins if the holders desire.

Batavia 4½s, on the other hand, dropped 6½ points when the same court decided that interest on these could be paid in dollars.

German corporation loans recorded losses of 1 to around 6 points. Part of these declines was in proportion to the cash interest which was payable, beginning today, on the final 1933 coupons of the listed issues. All of these bonds sold "flat" with the last 1933 coupon attached. The Reich is paying this coupon partly in cash and scrip. The German government 5½s and 7s, on which the interest is being paid in full, were steady.

Bonds of Argentina, France, Dutch East Indies, Denmark, Oslo and Colombia advanced 1 to 2. Austrian issues steadied on reports of government victories over the Socialists.

Wheat's Climb Is Slashed by Profit Taking

Strength of Stocks Gives Aid to Prices; Other Grains Decline.

Chicago, Feb. 15 (AP).—Dominated by strength of stocks and cotton, the wheat market displayed a uniform upward trend today, but met with prompt profit-taking sales on advances.

Helping to give firmness to wheat values were unofficial intimations from Washington that the proposed stringent restrictive measures against stock exchanges and grain exchanges would be modified.

An additional incentive for upturns of wheat values was absence of rain in domestic hard winter crop territory Southwest and persistent complaints that soft wheat in many parts of Ohio, Indiana and adjoining States was badly hurt by recent cold weather.

Wheat Closes Firm.

Wheat closed firm at the same as yesterday's finish to ¼ cent higher; corn, unchanged to ⅛ off; oats, ⅛ to ¼ down, and provisions, 7 to 12 cents up.

Particular attention among wheat traders was given to a statement from a leading authority here that in view of the prevailing light interest in the wheat market the inherent strength evident was surprising.

The statement suggested that the wheat market foreshadowed coming events, and that less drastic restrictions than had been proposed would stimulate increased demand, belief in better prices being encouraged by crop conditions. Assertions were also made that decreasing of domestic supplies of wheat was removing the greatest menace of recent years, namely continuous burdensome carryovers.

Bullish Factors Cited.

Disturbing aspects of the political situation in Europe and the Far East received more or less notice today as possible bullish factors concerning wheat, although international complications thus far have been nearly inoperative as a market influence here. Firmness of wheat futures at Liverpool today was attributed to unfavorable crop reports from France and India.

Some interest by wheat traders was shown in talk that cotton crop control plans now being pondered at Washington might be extended to grains.

Corn and oats were upheld by wheat strength and by reports that good shipping business in corn was being put through, but that the grain would be moved out from nonvisible supply points.

Provisions made substantial gains, responsive to general buying of lard.

Mine Pumps Sales Gain In Mexico

Improved activities of the mining industry in Mexico have been reflected in increasing sales of all kinds of machinery and supplies and more particularly pumping equipment, according to a report to the Commerce Department from Assistant Commercial Attache R. G. Glover, Mexico City.

As a result of improving world prices for metals, the report points out, many of the closed mines in Mexico are being rehabilitated. Since the mining interests have held down their purchases of implements and supplies to the minimum during the depression, increased activities are naturally stimulating the sale of machinery and replacement parts.

Recently, three large pumping installations were sold by the local representative of American manufacturers. The largest one was a 400-horsepower high-speed unit which will deliver 1,200 gallons per minute against a head of 1,060 feet. The second was a 250-horsepower unit delivering 500 gallons per minute against a head of 1,360 feet. The third was a 75-horsepower unit delivering 1,200 gallons per minute against a head of 175 feet. The first of these units, according to the report, is one of the largest pumping installations in the republic.

Grubb Is Elected President of Curb

New York, Feb. 15 (AP).—E. B. Grubb was elected president of the New York Curb Exchange by the board of governors yesterday, succeeding Howard C. Sykes, who has headed the exchange for two years and declined reelection.

Fred C. Moffatt was elected vice president to succeed Edwin Posner and Mortimer Landsburg was reelected treasurer.

Mr. Grubb, whose home is in Summit, N. J., became a member of the exchange in 1923, when he joined the firm of MacQuoid & Coady. He has been intimately connected with the governing board of the exchange since that time and has served as chairman of the committee on quotations, vice chairman of the committee on membership, and on the clearing house, arbitration, law, arrangements and general committees.

Crude Rubber Use Rises to 40,413 Tons

U. S. Consumption Gains 38.9 Per Cent; Imports Increase Also.

New York, Feb. 15.—Consumption of crude rubber by manufacturers in the United States for the month of January, 1934, amounted to 40,413 long tons, which compares with 29,087 long tons for December, 1933, and represents an increase of 38.9 per cent over December and 76.4 per cent over January a year ago, according to statistics released by the Rubber Manufacturers Association today. Consumption for January, 1933, was reported to be 22,906 long tons.

This organization reports imports of crude rubber for January, 1934, to be 46,204 long tons, an increase of 9.8 per cent over December, 1933, and 48.5 per cent above January, 1933.

This association estimates total domestic stocks of crude rubber on hand January 31, 1934 at 368,660 long tons, which compares with December 31, 1933, stocks of 264,541 long tons. Shipbuilding In Belfast Is Seen Climbing

The position of Belfast's shipbuilding industry at the beginning of the current year showed a decided improvement compared with the corresponding period of 1933, according to a report from Vice Consul Robert Janz, made public by the Commerce Department.

A year ago, the report points out, there was not a single ship in the stocks, and no indication that new work would soon be forthcoming. At the present time there are 75,000 tons in the local yards, with promises of more to come.

While it is true that world shipping and consequently shipbuilding is suffering greatly, the two Belfast plants have sufficient work on hand to carry them through the greater part of the current year, even if no additional orders are placed. Thus, the immediate outlook is relatively satisfactory, although the more remote prospects are obscure.

Two ships were launched at Belfast during the last calendar year, having a gross tonnage of 14,000 tons. In 1932, one ship of 5,740 tons was launched, while in 1931 the total tonnage was 79,434. Unemployment in the Belfast shipyards registered a progressive decline during 1933.

Radio Waves And Ripples

AUNT SADIE was listening to police calls on her short-wave receiver when we came in last night—an opportunity, we thought, for breaking the news about what the Federal Radio Commission has done for her. We had just heard that the Commission has allocated six additional frequencies for police broadcasting, now limited to three.

She took the tidings calmly, so we softened our disappointment by supposing listening to foreign stations had spoiled her for anything so commonplace as police calls, until we casually expressed the opinion that most police departments were planning shortly to install two-way communication equipment. Her interest appreciably heightened, and she began at once to ask a lot of questions we couldn't answer.

In our dealings with Aunt Sadie we have found it helps to keep her background in mind. Our understanding of this reaction, for example, grew as we recalled that in Perry, Mich., where Aunt Sadie spent most of her life, the party-line telephone still flourishes. It's been nearly two years since Aunt Sadie has enlivened a dull afternoon by listening to her neighbors' telephone conversations.

One of the air-line companies whose mail contract has been cancelled claims to have eliminated static in plane radio communication.

Antistatic headphones for pilots and ground operators is said to do the trick. The phones are equipped with a special diaphram the oscillations of which are limited or "dampened" with the result that even thunderstorms are quieted to murmurs above which signals are easily distinguished.

Engineers are developing the device for use in domestic receivers.

National's policy of welcoming any and all Congressional speechmakers and current limitations on debate in the House apparently are combining to drive self-expression-seeking Representatives to the network. N. B. C. has scheduled Representatives Arthur Lamneck and Harold McGugin for next week, with more in sight.

Planning Body Meets Today

Slum Clearance Will Be Among Projects Up for Action.

Confronted with an agenda which includes plans to raze slum buildings as a civil works project, selection of a site for the proposed Interior Building and reconsideration of Gravelly Point as the Capital's future airport, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission will open its February meeting today.

The commission is expected to act favorably on the proposal to demolish dilapidated structures in cases where the owner is willing to make an agreement with the CWA.

Plans for the extension of the Government Printing Office as a PWA project, remodeling of the old Pension Office, enlargement of the Federal warehouse and the District's civil works program to date also will be discussed. A new matter to be brought before the planners is the bill recently introduced which provides for construction of a National conservatory of music here.

A plan will be submitted for Turkey Thicket Playground in the northeast section. Progress of the survey to determine the route of Fort Foote parkway, a link in the George Washington Memorial parkway also will be reported.

Einstein Seeks Job For N. Y. Violinist

New York, Feb. 15 (U.P.).—Prof. Albert Einstein will send a personal letter of thanks to any one giving a job to Sigismund Alexander, unemployed violinist, for one month.

The famous scientist interested himself in Alexander's plight when the violinist protested that German members of the musicians' union never had a job for him and he felt racial prejudice militated against his employment.

Walt Mason, Himself

Posterity.

"The Government," said Dingbat Dole, "is getting deeper in the hole. It's blowing money right and left to help the jobless and bereft, to make its reconstruction schemes prove more than iridescent dreams. I must admit that Uncle Sam is trying hard to bust the jam that now impedes the Nation's trade, and keeps our industries decayed. He's peddling bonds to all the lads, and raising billions, tons of scads, and doesn't figure that some day someone, somehow, will have to pay Our children, when they take command, will all be taxed to beat the band. The generations after us will doubtless stand around and cuss, and talk of us with bitter hate, because they have to pay the freight. But then why worry? I'll be dead and with the angels overhead when all these evils overwhelm this poor old reconstructed realm. I watch the great game being played, and when the fiddler must be paid, I won't be here to pay my share, I will be too blamed dead to care." It is a scheme to give us thrills: let our descenants pay the bills. I wonder if there's any gent who cares a kopeck or a cent what may befall the stricken chumps who'll be here when we've bumped the bumps? Does any mortal care a hoot about the future's sad galoot, who'll have to sweat, with brooding mind, to pay the bills we leave behind?

THE BUNGLE FAMILY The Mystery Man By Harry J. Tuthill

WELL JO, ODD-LOOKING NEIGHBORS ARE NOTHING NEW TO US.
HE HAD SUCH A PERFECTLY VILLAINOUS EXPRESSION. LONG ARMS, AND TALKED SO STRANGELY THAT I COULD HARDLY UNDERSTAND HIM.
WE'LL HAVE BOTH HANDS FULL OF NEIGHBORS AT THAT OTHER PLACE. WHY WORRY ABOUT THOSE WE LEAVE BEHIND?
WHILE HE SHUFFLED THROUGH THAT FLAT HE KEPT LOOKING OVER HERE FROM THE CORNER OF HIS EYE. UGH! SUCH A WICKED-LOOKING MAN!
HE'D BETTER HAVE THE STUFF THAT GOES WITH A TOUGH LOOK TO GET ALONG HERE.
MY WORD, EVERY TIME I THINK OF MOVING....THROWING AWAY ALL THE HOURS I'VE SPENT IN TRAINING THESE TENANTS.
HA! YOU WON'T WORRY ABOUT MOVING IF THAT WOLFISH-LOOKING MAN RENTS THAT FLAT. UGH! JUST THINKING ABOUT HIS GREENISH EYES GIVES ME THE CREEPS!
